MOTHER OF POMEROY SEES FOSS

Governor Foss has granted Mrs. Ruth A. Pomeroy, mother of Jesse Pomeroy, the famous life term prisoner at Charlestown, an interview at 3 o'clock this afternoon. Mrs. Pomeroy has wanted to present her son's case to the Governor ever since reading of the unusual interest which his Excellency has already shown in other long term prisoners this Spring.

Mrs. Pomeroy feels that there are certain facts of Jesse's boyhood, and of the circumstances attending his conviction, which have never been fairly presented to the Governor or to the public. She believes that if she can once have the opportunity of telling the Governor her own story of how she, Jesse Pomeroy's mother, regards the case, it will undoubtedly influence the Governor to lighten the terms of his sentence, and perhaps to pardon him outright.

Now a Feeble Old Woman.

Governor Foss visited Jesse Pomeroy in his cell about three weeks ago, had a long conversation with him, and has since evidenced interest in the man's case. The Governor has already in the first year of his administration pardoned more prisoners than any other Governor in his entire term of office.

As soon as Mrs. Pomeroy read in the papers of the Governor's action in pardon-

CITY LOSES WATERED MILK CASE

The Boston White Cross Milk Company won a victory to-day when the full bench of the Supreme Court, in a majority opinion, sustained the exceptions of the company, thus setting aside the verdict of the jury in the Superior Criminal Court which had found the company guilty of having in its possession with intent to sell milk to which water had been added.

It is the most important milk decision handed down for many years by the Supreme Court of Massachusetts, and may result in new pure milk legislation. The court was divided on the question, but a majority opinion was not handed down.

The decision means that milk can be concentrated in other States, brought to this State and then have water added and the product sold as milk.

James O. Jordan, inspector of milk for the city of Boston, who read the decision a few minutes after it was received, said to an AMERICAN reporter: "I expect that Boston will now be flooded with concentrated milk."

Mixing the Milk.

"The evidence was to the effect that the defendant, having in its possession 120 quarts of what was called 'concentrated milk,' had added thereto 300 quarts of ice water, one gallon of heavy cream said to contain forty per cent. of milk fat and four gallons of 'concentrated skim milk,' and that the defendant intended to sell the mixture thus prepared.

"The defendant contended that the 'concentrated milk' or extract to which is added water was not milk within the meaning of the statute. It put in evidence the following facts, which so far as appears were not controverted: The defendant obtained a license under letters patent of the United States for the production and sale of 'concentrated milk,' and built and equipped a factory for that purpose in Vermont. It bought from farmers the best milk obtainable, such as was by test up to or above the standard fixed by the statutes of this Commonwealth. From this milk it separated the cream and treated separately the cream and skimmed milk. The cream and skimmed milk, thus separately treated,

ALL TESTIMONY IN BROKERS' CASE ENDS

The State closed its evidence in the Sedgwick-Berry trial at noon, after fifty-two consecutive court days of testimony. This is a record for Suffolk county for length of evidence in either side of a case. The principal State witness has been Elmer K. George, who was cashier for Curtis & Sedgwick and then for Sedgwick, Barry & Co. Mr. George has been on the stand enough hours to constitute forty court days, as computed by the trial reporters. He was on the stand to-day to complete testimony of tabulation for the State. The final witness for the State was George Montgomery, an accountant, who testified to tabulations he had prepared. Then began the preparations for the defence.

ACCIDENT IN SUBWAY.

A trolley wire broke in the subway entrance at the North Station at 8:54 a. m. to-day and delayed car traffic at that point for twenty-five minutes.

PROTEST TRAIN CUT BY B. & M.

Announcement was made to-day that the Boston Chamber of Commerce will investigate the action of the Boston & Maine officials whose intention is to cut eighteen trains per day from the road's schedule. The promise of immediate action in the matter by the Chamber of Commerce is the result of strong protest that are being made by the boards of trade of Waltham, Ayer, Greenfield, Fitchburg and other towns and cities which will be seriously affected by the proposed change in the Boston & Maine schedules.

Regarding the chamber's action, Secretary James A. McKibben of that body said to-day:

"There will be a meeting of the railroad committee within a few days and the matter will be investigated. I am not sufficiently informed on the matter to know what action the chamber will be likely to take."

Wire Protest to Melien.

Asked if the Massachusetts Railroad Commission would act, Chairman White said to-day:

"I have no official information from the Boston & Maine or anywhere else that the road is to take off any of its trains. No action has been taken by this board and none will be taken until further information is received."

Officers of the Greenfield board of trade have wired their protest direct to President Melien of the New Haven. The Boston & Maine proposes to eliminate two of the Greenfield trains, beginning Monday.

Washington has been informed of the contemplated action of the railroad, inasmuch as the taking off of mail trains has not yet been put into effect, nothing was done officially to-day.

Retrenchment is the explanation advanced by the road. It is stated that certain trains do not pay, and that the road will not stand the expense of running them. Three of the eighteen that are to be discontinued have mail cars attached, and the rest carry mail matter in the baggage cars so that the move, if carried out, will be a serious blow to the efficiency of the post-office.

No Extra Summer Schedule.

Although at this time of the year the road commonly puts on additional trains to accommodate the vacation traffic, it is announced that there will be no extra schedule.

The New Haven Railroad offices were deluged to-day with telegrams, telephone messages and letters of protest from indignant citizens and officials of towns and cities on the Boston & Maine. Petitions of protest are now being circulated all along the line.

S. W. Shepardson, assistant superintendent of the railway mail service at Boston, said: "This is the greatest blow the railway mail service has ever had, but I do not know how the government can prevent it. There is, as far as I know, no contract which compels the road not to cut out these trains. It will seriously impair the service in New England and if they cut too many something will have to be done to get the mail delivered."

Protests from Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont are being prepared, for the discontinuance of these trains and the failure to put on the extra Summer schedule will injure cities and towns in these States. Three of the trains to be taken off between now and June 1 are the 5 a. m. on the Fitchburg division for Troy, N. Y., one from Troy that arrives in Boston at 10:30 p. m., and another leaving Boston for Concord, N. H., at 3 in the afternoon.

WOMEN START 'L' CAR CRUSADE

A movement to stop crowding in the street cars of the Boston Elevated Railroad was started by representative Boston women to-day. The 480 members of the Women's Charity Club have signed a petition that is to be sent to the Elevated road, asking that cars enough be provided to avoid the present crowding, and also asking that the steps on street cars be lowered. The petition reads:

"To the Boston Elevated Railroad: The 480 members of the Women's Charity Club respectfully petition that the steps of street cars be lowered, and cars enough provided to avoid the present unseemly crowding."

The petition was presented before meeting of the club to-day by the board of directors and was unanimously adopted. The secretary was instructed to sign for the members and send the petition to the Elevated Company.

It is believed that the movement will be taken up by other women's organizations throughout the city.

At the present time the lower steps of street cars are closed and operated by the Boston Elevated Company are from seventeen and a half inches to eighteen inches from the ground. The second step varies from twelve and a half to fourteen and a half inches in height.

KERBY DEFIES TYPOS TO BRING LIBEL SUIT

NEW YORK, May 18.—When told that James M. Lynch, president of the International Typographical Union, was preparing a libel suit for $100,000 damages against the officers of the National Manufacturers' Association, John Kerby, jr., president of that organization, said: "If the shoe fits, let them put it on. Interesting developments may be expected."

Alfred J. Talley, attorney for President Lynch, said that papers would be served on President Kerby and other officers of the Manufacturers' Association.

MADERO ORDERS MEXICAN PEACE

EL PASO, Tex., May 18.—Provisional President Madero to-day dispatched couriers to all the military commanders of the insurrection bearing the following manifesto.

I hereby make known to all the chiefs of the army of liberation in the whole republic that General Porfirio Diaz, having announced his intention of resigning from power this month, the representatives of my government and the representatives of the government of General Diaz have signed a general armistice for five days, which will terminate on the 22d of this month at 11 p. m.

In substance I have agreed to suspend all kind of hostilities respecting which the armistice contains the following clauses:

1.—Both contending armies shall suspend any advance of troops.

2.—Each one of the contending parties shall reserve the right to direct the mobilization of its forces within the territory under its control with the object of seeking good quarters.

3.—The safe conduct which the various chiefs of both armies may ask shall be respected and facilities for the free use of the telegraph and mail shall be given.

Both parties are obliged to communicate immediately by telegraph or otherwise this armistice to the military chiefs, to whom they look for an immediate fulfilment of these conditions.

The revolutionary armies will not be disbanded, it was decided to-day, until the Cabinet has been reorganized and the fourteen governorships allotted to the insurrection have been filled. Final disarmament will be made only when all the concessions promised by Diaz are carried out.

HINDU GOT $25,000 IN BULL CASE

ALFRED Mc. May 18.—Letters addressed to the late Mrs. Ole Bull, widow of the great violinist, in which she was called "Dearest Mother" and "Dear Saint Sara" and signed "Your own Son," were introduced to-day in the trial to break the will of Mrs. Bull, brought by her daughter, Mrs. Olea Bull Vaughn of Cambridge.

The letters were written to Dr. Bose, a Hindoo of Calcutta, whom Mrs. Bull met in that country and to whom she gave more than $25,000 while she was alive and remembered with a $5,000 legacy in her will.

It was also insinuated to-day that Miss Margaret E. Noble, a Hindoo follower when Mrs. Bull met in India, disappeared from the country suddenly in March, after the will contest was brought, selling under a fictitious name for Calcutta from New York.

Followed Hindoo Priest.

It is claimed that Miss Noble had a great deal to do with introducing the mysteries of Indo to Mrs. Bull to such an extent that the widow followed a Swami (priest) to India and remained there, while her little granddaughter was critically ill.

It is claimed that among the curious things Mrs. Bull fondly believed when she made her will being most of her $400,000 estate to others than her daughter was that Mrs. Abbe Shapleigh, an old friend, would transmit thoughts that would tell her through a telephone. This belief is supposed to be the reason that Mrs. Bull failed to remember Mrs. Shapleigh for her will, but was most generous to the Hindoos.

Lawyer Sherman L. Whipple, representing Mrs. Vaughn, Mrs. Bull's daughter, charged today that many of the letters supposed to be written by Mrs. Bull were dictated by Miss Noble, while Mrs. Bull was incapacitated for writing.

The will contest is being brought by Mrs. Olea Bull Vaughn, Mrs. Bull's daughter. It is claimed that Mrs. Bull was not competent to make a will and also that she was surrounded by influences that caused her to mistreat her daughter in the distribution of her fortune.

Mr. Whipple wanted to get several letters allowed in the case that had been used in Mrs. Vaughn's recent divorce case in Boston. Objection was made to this. It was then Mr. Whipple said:

Accuses Miss Noble.

"I do not believe that many of the typewritten letters purporting to be signed by Mrs. Bull were written by her, but that they were dictated by Miss Noble when Mrs. Bull was incompetent to write a letter."

Mr. Whipple announced that Mrs. Alvin Shapleigh, who was for many years a member of the Bull household, would be called to the stand to testify to the effect that the letters would be brought in through her as the recipient of them.

Joseph Thorp, a brother of Mrs. Bull, on the witness stand was asked to read any letters from Mrs. Bull between 1902 and 1904. He produced one written from Mrs. Bull's home in Cambridge, it was dated December 3, 1902:

"I have had a pleasant Thanksgiving," wrote Mrs. Bull, "and I am looking for-

QUIMBY HUNT IN 2 CITIES

The time of the stage, designed as the grandeur of an ocean liner, left Boston Saturday night for New York, is believed to have been the cause of the strange disappearance on Monday of Miss Gertrude Quimby, the Back Bay fairly school girl beauty.

Facts developed to-day that caused the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children to take up the hunt for the girl. It is found that the girl is in the custody of the police of New York, as her relatives suspect, a warrant will be asked for his arrest.

Although attending school, it has been learned that Miss Quimby had been posing for a photographer for pictures that were used as advertisements. She had to a great extent, artistic talent and temperament, and her whole life was taken up with dreams of posing for artists and appearing behind the footlights. She was even known in the theatrical district as Effie Van Ness, this name being found on a little piece that she left behind.

The one thing that seems to have precipitated the disappearance of the girl this time—she had been away for from two to four days before—was an attempt on the part of her mother to give her big daughter a whipping.

Letters Shed Light on Case.

Two letters found tucked away under the paper in the bottom of a bureau drawer by Miss Quimby threw light on the mysterious case.

One of the letters is to an agent of the society at No. 43 Mount Vernon street. It is misdated and the writing is very erratic compared with regular tough immaculate penmanship of the little Latin exclass book, found in the desk, and shows that she was laboring under the greatest excitement when she wrote.

The letter follows:

My Dear Miss Burnett:

I am very sorry, but I cannot come to see you on Tuesday, as I have an engagement with the latter for a girl which I did not think of at the time I said I would see you. I do think everything is going to turn out all right at home, though I hardly think I should like to go and live with another family. And I think mother is going to be all right and Werner isn't saying a word. So suppose we leave it like this, that we do not do anything about it until she commences the old tricks again, then I'll let you know.

Sincerely, GERTRUDE QUIMBY.

Punished by Her Mother.

The mother explained that she had been having a great deal of trouble with the girl about staying away from home so much, and friends had advised her that a whipping would be a very good thing for Gertrude. So one night a couple of weeks ago when she says Gertrude was late she tried to punish her. She was sick and blue for a week, where the girl kicked me," she explained to-day. "Well, the girl went right in to her grandmother and told her, and the grandmother at once complained to the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children. The agent came in, and said that the grandmother wanted Gertrude to board with another family, and be taken away from her mother. The matter was finally smoothed over.

"I don't know what has come over the girl this last six months," continued the mother. "She has gotten in with a crowd of bad companions. Lately she has been spending all her time with a married woman friend who is the wife of a chauffeur. She is a very gay woman, out every night, more than I think a married were then in certain proportions carried through pipes to a mixing tank, where they were blended according to a formula so that the milk solids and the fat should not be less than the amounts required by our statutes for standard milk and the water should not exceed one-fourth part of that allowed for such standard milk. This combination was then concentrated milk manufactured by the defendant, to which was afterward added three parts of water with the intention of selling the mixture thus produced as milk.

"One of these witnesses testified that whole or natural milk is milk as it is taken from the cow, and that the defendant's product was not milk and was not evaporated milk, and that it was not the ordinary condensed milk of commerce, but that the word stood for a mixture of concentrated skim and pasteurized cream.' There was no effort on the part of what was generally known or dealt with in the trade as milk. It was assumed at the trial that in order to convict the defendant it must be shown that the concentrated milk which the defendant had added water was 'milk' within the meaning of the revised laws. So I see it.

"It is not contended that the manufactured product of the defendant to which it added water for reduction and sale was not a product of milk when it left the cow. And we have searched the evidence in vain for anything upon which it can be found that this manufactured product had come to be known in the trade as milk. There is nothing in the evidence tending to show that the product defendant had been dealt with in the market, or had been a subject, of trade, or even had been in the hands of any dealer other than the defendant himself. Accordingly, for the delivery of milk would be satisfied by the delivery of the concentrated product . . . It is to make milk with the meaning of such a contract than natural milk which does not come up to the prescribed standard. The substance itself is not milk, just as butter and cheese are condensed milk are not themselves milk.

"For these reasons the defendant's exceptions to the instructions given to the jury must be sustained."

MILITIAMAN HAS NO RIGHT TO TAKE LIFE

DALLAS, Tex., May 18.—The case of J. D. Manley, the Dallas National Guardsman, convicted of murder of L. Reichstein, while the National Guard was encamped during President Taft's visit in October, has been reversed and remanded by the state court of Criminal Appeals. On the question of the right of a guardsman to kill a man under orders from a superior officers, the court holds that a militiaman has nothing more than a policeman, and is not warranted in taking human life.

COTTON BULLS RULE MARKET

Cotton prices on the New York Exchange to-day made a new high record for the old crop months when the July option got up at 16 cents. Not only do the bulls appear to dominate the old crop but their influence is plainly visible in the new crop options. When the market opened in New York this morning there was unusual activity, with brokers scrambling to obtain what cotton was offered at advances up to 15 points.

The main cause of the advance in the market, however, lies in the fact that cotton cannot be obtained to supply spinners' needs, even under pressure curtailment of outputs. Last year's crop was 2,000,000 bales under what was wanted and as this year's crop is not very promising those who hold the actual cotton to-day refuse to sell as it is expected that by September there will be practically a cotton famine.

"NO VOTE, NO TAX," SAYS CHICAGO WOMAN

CHICAGO, May 18.—Miss Belle Squire, member of the No Vote, No Tax League, has filed a blank personal property tax schedule with the following notation: "I protest against the double insult of being classed among the criminals, idiots, insane, the lunatics, paupers and minors of the State by the government under which I was born and bred to believe that being forced by law to help support by my labor the government that so humiliates me. For this reason I absolutely refuse to fill in the schedule."

MRS. POMEROY SEES GOVERNOR

ing other prisoners this Spring, she determined to see him, if possible, to plead her son's cause. On her last visit to her son, the middle of April, they talked it over together, and decided that she should try to gain an interview at once. The next day she came in the Governor had left for the day. Two weeks ago she wrote to the executive office asking for an appointment and this week it was arranged that she should see the Governor this afternoon.

The little old lady, who is a feeble, trembling old woman now, has devoted the prime of her life to making these thirty-seven years of her son's imprisonment more endurable for him. She lives alone with a helpless crippled girl in a little cottage in North Weymouth, doing all the simple house work, and tending a vegetable garden for the sake of the outdoor exercise. Her life is simple and isolated, as she told an AMERICAN reporter.

Wants to Help Her Boy.

"The neighbors around here have shown themselves very kindly in what little I have seen of them, but I never go to their houses, and it is very seldom that any one stops in here. When I do see them, they talk about everything but my son, and I think it is because they are afraid it will hurt my feelings for them to refer to it, but, of course, I am always talking about it, so that makes a sort of barrier between us. But my life is over anyway, so I no longer take an interest in anything, just for my own self. The only interest I have left in life is trying to do something for my boy before I go."

All the week the plucky mother has been busy working over a petition which she wishes to present to the Governor. And between times she has gone over and over in her mind all the painful incidents of those black months, almost forty years ago, when trouble descended so swiftly upon her and her boy. In spite of her many years of disappointments, hope has been high in her heart that to-day's interview may bring cheer and relief to her son.

JESSE POMEROY'S MOTHER, WHO TAKES PLEA TO GOVERNOR

MRS. POMEROY.

STAGE LURES BACK BAY GIRL

woman should be, and she's to fit com pany for a young girl. But Gertrude would go in there from school and stay until late at night, just coming upstairs to sleep, and sometimes she wouldn't even do that.

"This is not the first time that Gertrude has left home. April 10 was the last time. She was gone two days and two nights then.

"Then about two weeks ago, she disappeared one Saturday afternoon, and she was gone four days and four nights, until Wednesday night.

"I did have hopes of getting her back until to-day, but those hopes' heart is broken, and I feel that I have lost my daughter. One of the scene shifters at a down - town theatre came up here and said that he recognized the pictures in the papers to be those of a very pretty and stage-struck girl who had been around behind the scenes of the theatre in a great deal lately while musical comedy was playing there. She was always seen with one of the principals, an older man, and he also told us that those four days that she was missing, she was staying at a theatrical hotel on Tremont street.

"She went under the name of Elsie Van Ness. Saturday night the show he was in left town, and Monday afternoon she disappeared, and I am convinced that she went down to New York, hoping he can get her on the stage.

"I found out some more about her to-day. This morning a detective came to the store where I am employed and he didn't know I was Gertrude's mother, but he just happened to pick up the morning papers, and he saw Gertrude's picture, and he says, 'Why, there is a picture of this girl in my shoe catalogue,' and sure enough, there she was.

"Posing or going on the stage were the only things Gertrude would hear of doing. She had a good deal of ability as an artist, and I wanted her to learn designing.

As Mrs. Werner talked, she had been sitting beside Gertrude's desk in her bedroom, going through the drawers and looking over many drawings which she had left. They were chiefly ballet girls, and girls' heads and they showed a great deal of facility with the pencil. With them were stacks of magazines, nearly all of them having girls' heads for cover designs. In one drawer were her Latin exercise book, and a neatly labelled 'cook book,' in which she had copied her favorite receipts: "Butter Cornsels, Fudge, Spanish Cream, Sponge Cake, Boiled Chocolate Frosting" the list runs. A little silver purse which Gertrude carried until about two weeks ago had the name 'Elsie Van Ness' printed on the grey lining. In the bureau drawers were piles of neatly folded clothes, but examination showed that every one of these was marked in pink letters, and her mother explained that she had taken to her suit case only clothes which had no name on them, or from which she was able to cut off the mark.

"She left her good black voile skirt, because it was too short to suit her now, and took a little blue serge skirt, that had just bought her to wear to school. The mother continued: "She is very slight in build, to her around the hips, and had it off the belt, and all tucked. She cut it with a stitch, so I don't know what she will do with it, but she took it for granted I'd rip it off yet, and it was longer for her than her other skirts.

Begged For a New Suit.

"She had been begging me to buy her a new suit. But I wouldn't do it. I told her her suit was good enough, and I bought her a nice coat. Last week when she came to have it fitted, she wanted to make the fitter have it ready for her Saturday. The fitter runs busy and couldn't do it, and that made her cross, but I said there was no reason why she should be in such a rush, and would not insist on her getting it so soon. She was very angry, and she was in such a hurry."

With the letter from Gertrude to the agent of the S. P. C. C. under the paper of her burned drawer and a picture of a young boy in a military uniform and a letter a "Bill," whom her mother did not know. The letter read:

Dear Bill:

Poor me, little Dorothy has been taken out of school and her confounded ma is going to put her in some private school. I never felt so sorry over any of my own troubles as I do for her. For, after all, she's a sweet little thing. As for me, I'll be big the size of a paper I have to be brief, so I'll close promising to write for 2c, when she can't. It's going to make it terribly lonesome, for she's "just right."

Your friend,

G. D.

How Dandruff is Contracted

An eminent physician says every one should be very careful to avoid using combs and brushes in public places, because dandruff is contagious and is often transmitted from one person to another in this way. The trouble has become so general that many remedies are advertised as a cure.

The best and most effective preparation is Bit's Head Wash, the antiseptic shampoo.

It is made of refined creamy soap, cochin cocoanut oil, glycerin, white of eggs and a small percentage of salicylic acid.

By cleansing the scalp with Bit's Head Wash, dandruff is not only entirely removed, but the hair itself is restored to a glossy, healthy condition. The frequent use of this shampoo will prevent dandruff from forming and keep the scalp in a delightfully clean condition.

In hygienic tubes 25 cents, at drug and department stores.

Friday Three-Hour Sales

THE SURVIVAL OF THE FITTEST whether we like the theory or not is undoubtedly true in its general application. As a rule, that is best which lasts best. If you apply this principle to the Three-Hour Sales, what is the conclusion? No other series of special sales ever ran so long (nearly ten years) in this country. The verdict of the public seems too obvious for comment.

MRS. OLE BULL'S LETTERS FILLED WITH ALLUSIONS TO HINDOO MYSTIC CULT

ward to an enjoyable Christmas with you.

This letter was written to Mrs. Shaplaigh at West Lebanon, N. H.

"Did Mrs. Bull go to West Lebanon for Christmas?

"I don't know.

Gave Home for Hospital.

In an undated letter to Mr. Tharp, Mrs. Bull wrote:

"It is my wish that the Studio building in Cambridge be used as a home and that Olea come there to live. The big mansion house is empty and it is planned that be turned into a hospital for Dr. Thomas M. Durrell of Somerville, who cared for Mrs. Bulger while critically ill at my home."

"I wrote and objected to this," said Mr. Tharp, "and later on my sister agreed with me about not giving the mansion for a hospital."

Q.—Did Mrs. Vaughn object to the hospital? A.—Mrs. Vaughn intimated she objected to the spending of money by her mother. She also objected to her spending money with the Hindoos. Mrs. Bull's home in Cambridge was one of the finest buildings in that city.

Q.—How long did your sister keep talking about hospitals? A.—I do not know, but she was greatly interested in hospitals.

Q.—Are you aware of the amount of money that Mrs. Bull gave the Hindoos? A.—I know some of the amounts, not all.

Q.—What did she give to Dr. Noble? A.—Once she gave him 1,000 pounds and a second time 2,000 pounds—about $20,000 in all.

No Money Came Back.

Q.—Did any of that money ever come back? No sir.

Q.—What was the money? A.—It was supposed to be to buy land in Calcutta for the Hindoos to build a school for girls to.

Q.—Do you know the Hindoo who called Mrs. Bull "Dearest Mother"? A.—I know him. (Dr. Bose.)

Q.—Was Dr. Bose your sister went with? A.—In India.

Q.—Do you know who paid his expenses when he came to this country? A.—I do not.

Q.—Was your sister a generous contributor to Miss Noble and Dr. Bose in Calcutta? A.—Yes, she was. (Mrs. Bull left Miss Noble $20,000 in her will.—Editor.) She visited Dr. Bose in Bullihe, in a laboratory in Calcutta. His whole ambition was to develop plant response through delicate influence.

Just what this meant seemed to bother Mr. Whipple and he requested that he would come back to it later.

Had Indian School.

Q.—How did you learn that your sister, Mrs. Bull, was sending Miss Noble money? A.—I learned that from my sister. She told me that Miss Noble was conducting a school for Indian children in Calcutta.

Q.—Did Mrs. Vaughan remonstrate with her mother about her donating money to the Hindoos? A.—She did.

Q.—Did you? A.—Yes, sir, I did.

Q.—Do you correspond with her? A.—Yes, sir, I do.

Q.—Is it under her own name that you correspond with her in Calcutta? A.—Yes, sir.

Had Indian School.

Q.—How did you learn that your sister, Mrs. Bull, was sending Miss Noble money? A.—I learned that from my sister. She told me that Miss Noble was conducting a school for Indian children in Calcutta.

Q.—Did you? A.—Yes, sir, I did.

Q.—Letters were then introduced, dated Feb. 24 and Jan. 5, 1910. Both were from Dr. Bose to Mrs. Bull, dated in Calcutta, and began "Dearest Mother," and were signed "From your own son." Q.—Did you know that Mrs. Noble frequently traveled under an assumed name? A.—No, sir, I did not.

Another letter like the above, from Dr. Bose to Mrs. Bull and one from Miss Jex Noble to Mrs. Bull, dated Feb. 11, 1910, in Calcutta, and beginning "Dear Saint Sara," were introduced.

A letter was read from Dr. Bose to Mrs. Bull as follows:

Calcutta, India, June 12, 1910.

Dearest Mother:

All I could do failed to save my daughter. She passed away. God bless you and give you many lick.

YOUR OWN SON.

Lawyer Whipple asked if Dr. Bose did not write that letter. Mr. Thorpe replied that he did.

Q.—How old is Dr. Bose? A.—Forty-five. He is a high caste Hindu and of the Hindoo religion.

Q.—How long and Mrs. Bull been giving money to Dr. Bose? A.—Three years after she met him.

Q.—Can you say how much she donated to him each year? A.—I should say about $5,000 a year.

Q.—What was the average of her income? A.—About $15,000 a year.

Q.—How much money did Mrs. Bull give to Miss Noble? A.—I should say about $3,000 a year for her work.

Miss Noble's Claim.

Q.—Do you know that Miss Noble has a claim of 1,000 pounds ($5,000) against the estate of Mrs. Bull on a note? A.—Yes, I do.

Q.—Was Miss Noble with Mrs. Bull when she died? A.—Yes, sir; she was. She came to see Mrs. Bull's daughter in India. She sailed early in March from New York.

Q.—It was after the petition was filed in the matter of the will of Mrs. Bull? A.—Yes, sir; it was.

Q.—Was any effort to take her deposition? A.—No, sir.

Q.—Do you know what name she sailed under? A.—I do not.

Q.—Do you correspond with her? A.—Yes, sir; I do.

Q.—Is it under her own name that you correspond with her in Calcutta? A.—Yes, sir.

Framingham Newton

The Framingham Gas, Fuel and Power Company has purchased a large tract of land adjoining its plant on Irving St. in Framingham.

Mr. Fred R. Hayward has purchased the estate on the corner of Centre and Hyde Streets in Newton Highlands. Alcord Brothers were the real estate brokers.

The Massachusetts Title Insurance Company examined and guaranteed the titles.

In order to avoid worry and to eliminate the many chances of loss from title defects the prudent buyer of real estate or lender on mortgages employs this company to search the title.

B. & M. CAN FURNISH POWER TO ITSELF NOW

Governor Foss today signed a bill to permit the Berkshire Street Railway Company to furnish electricity to railroad corporations operating in the Hoosac Tunnel, namely the Fitchburg & Maine Railroad. Both the Berkshire and the Boston & Maine roads are owned by the New Haven.

MAN IN HOSPITAL CANNOT TELL NAME

The police of division 11 are trying to learn the identity of a man who was found unconscious in front of No. 22 Parkman street, Dorchester, who has been unable to give an account of himself in the City Hospital, where he was taken. He is evidently a laborer, about sixty-five years old, with gray hair and mustache. He wore a black shirt and blue overalls.

COLLEGE WOMEN STRIKE PICKETS

Two Wellesley College women doing picket duty for the forty girl nightdress makers on strike at the shop of the Kingstone Manufacturing Company on the Kingston street, attracted a large crowd of onlookers today.

Miss E. J. Hutchinson, a Wellesley professor, and Mrs. A. S. Clark, wife of a Boston newspaper man and a graduate of Wellesley, were the pickets in question. In company with the girl strikers, they did everything possible to win over the strike-breaking women employed by the firm.

Only nine of the strike-breaking women were able to resist the pleas of the Wellesley advocates of trade unionism.

Mrs. Clark is president of the Woman's Trade Union League of this city, while Miss Hutchinson is an active worker in the movement begun by the league for a living wage for the women wage workers of Boston. The league is made up in large parts of women of means and working women.

"There is no sacrifice too great for one to make to help these girls win their strike," said Mrs. Clark. "These girls were getting forty cents a dozen on a certain kind of nightdress. The firm cut this down to thirty-five cents a dozen, and the members of the Woman's Trade Union League are going to stand behind the strikers until the old wage rate is restored."

FINDS CAT AND HEN LIVING IN ONE NEST

BROCKTON, May 18.—Edgar P. Howard of West Elm street discovered a rare combination in his barn in searching for eggs he found an unusually large one and in it were his favorite tabby cat, Mary Gordon, and a choice Plymouth Rock hen snuggled up close together. Under them he found fourteen eggs and three small kittens.

ENGLISH AVIATOR INJURED IN FALL

SCARBOROUGH, Eng., May 18.—Aviator B. C. Hucks a former assistant of Claude Grahame-White, the English birdman, was badly injured at Filey, near here, today while making a flight. When in midair the propeller came off his aeroplane and the machine and aviator crashed to earth. The aeroplane was wrecked and Hucks suffered injuries about the head and a broken leg.

CAMMORRA TALE THRILLS COURT

VITERBO, May 18. Two members of the Camorra, who have turned State's evidence, admitting participation in the Barone di Nagni murder, testified in Assize Court today with their confessions. They are Tommaso de de Angelis and Gaetano Amedio, formerly accused of participation in the murders of Gennaro Cuocolo and Maria Cutinelli Cuocolo, but later absolved by the State upon the making of their confessions. These men are the especial objects of hatred by Cira Vitozzi, the priest, and Giovanni Accettore, both of whom bear private grudges against them.

De Angelis was first called to the witness chair. He told of his friendship for Gennaro Cuocolo the Camorrist and police agent, and how the excitement of Egidio Perrelli and other leaders in the society were aroused by certain acts of Cuocolo.

"His duty was to plan crimes which were afterward carried out," said De Angelis. "After Cuocolo would work out the problem and tell how the crime should be done, a council would be held to appoint the executioners. Sometimes the police became active against so many of Cuocolo's enemies before the time set for the crime that suspicion arose against the man."

De Angelis then proceeded with the story of how he fell in with Gaetano Amedio, another member of the Neapolitan gang, and how they became inseparable cronies.

Amedio and Vitozzi are accused by the prosecution of being in league in their accusations against Amedio of the police to shield the real murderers of the Cuocolos. Vitozzi testified that Amedio and de Angelis betrayed their guilt in a spiritual confession made to the priest.

MISS PECK GOING TO SOUTH AMERICA

In a lecture last night in Jacob Sleeper Hall, Boston University, for the benefit of the International Institute for Girls in Spain, Miss Annie S. Peck, celebrated mountain climber, announced that at the close of her lecture tour in this country she would go to South America and make further explorations, and hoped to reach the summit of several high mountains which have never before been visited by human beings. Miss Peck once climbed Mount Huascaran in the Andes, which is 1,000 feet higher than Mount Sir Edmund and higher than any peak ever visited by mankind.

20 NEAR DEATH IN COLLEGE FIRE

HALIFAX, May 18.—The Rev. Father Walsh and twenty boys who were asleep on the top floor of St. Mary's Roman Catholic college, had a narrow escape from death by fire early today.

They were cut off by the flames from receiving the fire escapes, but managed to grope their way through smoke-filled halls to the stairway and then reached the open. The blaze was confined to the west wing. The loss is $5,000.

BIG SHRINKAGE IN MELROSE CAPITAL

A falling off in manufactures in Melrose, amounting to 10 per cent, in the five years from 1904 to 1909, was shown today in a statement issued by the Census Bureau at Washington. The value of products turned out in Melrose during the latter year was only $2,823,000 as compared with $3,451,000 in 1904. The average number of wage-earners employed in Melrose fell from 1,571 to 1,038, and although there were twenty-five establishments listed in 1909 as against twenty-four in 1904, the capital employed had shrunk from $4,645,000 to $2,915,000.

HOUSE PASSES "DIRECT" BILL

The House by an overwhelming vote today adopted the Donahue order introduced by Representative Robert N. Turner of Waltham, favoring the direct election of United States Senators by the people, and urging Senators Lodge and Crane to vote in favor of the resolution in Congress.

A resolution in favor of the direct election of Senators was passed by the House several weeks ago. The resolution reached the State Senate, where it was tabled. No action has yet been taken on the resolution in the upper branch. The Donahue order was introduced in order that word of the favorable action of the Massachusetts House might officially reach the United States Senate before that body votes on the question of direct elections.

She Came from Boston

In the "Hotel" Column of the Sun today is an item about a little girl. The item does not give the girl's address, but it is apparently in "Athens of America." The item follows:

John Hobby, an assistant manager at the Waldorf, was keeping the weather open for infractions of discipline when a card was brought him. In a few moments he was looking down at a neat little 8-year-old girl, who spoke with a precision of language that agreed with the address on her card

"Are you one of the managers?" she said.

"Tha, in what I am told," replied Hobby. "Are you one of the authorities here?"

"I believe so. What can I do for you?"

"I regret that I am obliged to make a complaint. It is a very serious matter, and I beg that you give it immediate attention."

"Yes, miss," said Hobby, wondering what was coming.

"As I was entering the elevator one of your bellboys, who was carrying some luggage, insulted me by telling the officer inquires immediate apology."

"What I apologize to you now, Miss?" inquired Hobby.

"If so, I apologize."

"No, that would be insufficient. Some severe punishment should be visited upon the bellboy."

"Shall I discharge him at once?"

"No; I should be loath to request that such a course be pursued. But I think he ought to be severely reprimanded."

Hobby promised to visit the required punishment. The little girl thanked him graciously, adjusted her glasses and went her way conscious of duty well performed.

TEACHER AND BOYS DROWN

LUDINGHAUSEN, Prussia, May 18.—While bathing in an abandoned quarry pit near here today a school teacher and six pupils were drowned.

SIMPSON IS FOUND GUILTY

Harry B. W. Simpson was found guilty of manslaughter for the killing of Mrs. Belle Horn at his apartment on Shawmut avenue, about a year ago, in a verdict that was rendered today in the Criminal Court of Suffolk county.

Simpson is thirty-one years of age and called Mrs. Horn his wife, although it was said that they were never married. According to the testimony he beat the woman to death, but he declared on the witness stand that he hit her only in fool.

When the verdict was read after the opening of court to-day several of the young man's relatives were in court. A sister broke down and sobbed. Simpson was very pale and only maintained his composure by apparent great effort.

The jury went out shortly after noon yesterday. They discussed the evidence six hours and sealed their verdict, it being opened today. The trial was before Judge Stevens and a jury.

The maximum penalty for manslaughter in this State is twenty years in State prison.

LIVELY FIRE IN DORCHESTER

A squad of volunteers headed by former State Senator Thomas Leavitt, fought a spectacular fire at Fields Corner Square, Dorchester, today when flames suddenly shot out of the hay in the stable of J. E. Robinson & Co. An alarm was turned in and when the volunteer firefighters jumped into the building and threw bundles of burning hay into the street in an effort to keep the fire from reaching the stacks of baled stored in the shed.

The burning hay in the square caused excitement in the neighborhood, and the girl operators in the Dorchester telephone exchange neglected to turn the windows fearing that the building was in danger.

NEW INSTITUTE OPENING SOON

Boston's latest educational institution, the $1,500,000 Wentworth Institute, on South Huntington avenue, has issued advance copies of its first catalogue proclaiming the advantages of the new industrial school for Education in the Mechanical Arts." It is expected the school will be opened in September. It was founded by the late millionaire, Arioch Wentworth, headed by a board of directors composed of prominent Bostonians, and guided by Principal A. L. Williston.

The plans have provided for short one-year courses in the more elemental manufacturing and building trades, two-year courses in various kinds of construction, design and operation; part-time courses for those handicapped by lack of time, evening courses and an employment bureau.

Construction has been far advanced on a foundry, five stories high and containing a carpenter, pattern, machine, blacksmith and plumbing shop and an electric wiring room. Other buildings will house laboratories. In addition there will be a wing for an administration building and a large power house.

The curriculum allows for one-year term, at which machine work, carpentry and building, electric wiring and plumbing will be taught. Ability to profit by the instruction is to be the only entrance requirement.

For the two-year course machine construction and tool design, electrical construction and operation will be given, and for this work English and arithmetic will be required for entrance.

The tuition to be charged is to be practically nominal.

SEARS PICTURES AT INDUSTRIAL HOME

"Dick" Sears, the Boston AMERICAN photographer, entertained over 200 at the Boston Industrial Home, Davis street, last evening with his latest and moving pictures. The windows of the hall were lowered and the screen being transparent a crowd collected outside the building and enjoyed the pictures and gave Sears cheer after cheer. He showed pictures of famous people that he had met. Baseball was also shown in action pictures. Mr. Sears, being the only photographer that has ever been among the sepers at Penikese Island, he showed many interesting views of that colony.

KIND, DEAR, GOOD A. MUTT; HE GIVES A FRIENDLY HINT

JEFF: I'M SURPRISED AT YOU SHOWING UP IN THE SUNDAY PAPER IN THE SAME SUIT YOU WEAR EVERY DAY. YOU GOTTA SHOW CLASS ON SUNDAY. COME ON, I'LL GO WITH YOU AND PICK OUT SOMETHING CLASSY FOR YOU
I THOUGHT IT LOOKED PRETTY GOOD

WHAT is your opinion of the scenery Mr. Jeff is wearing in this picture?

Jeff thinks it is all right. Mr. A. Mutt takes exceptions.

Pretty good pal, A Mutt. Somewhat rough at times, perhaps, inclined to the plastic, maybe, but down at bottom a right good soul.

Our next picture, ladies and gentlemen—of course you'll have to wait for the Sunday AMERICAN to see the Sunday scenery—shows Mutt and Jeff in the clothing store.

In all, there are six pictures, straight across the page, and we violate no confidence when we admit that Jeff finally gets him a Sunday suit.

How does A. Mutt come out of the experience? That's a fair question.

Well, that was the fate of Shepard, the man who gave the city of Washington its beautiful driveway? How did the Republican leaders do to Eugene N. Foss when Foss gave them the straight tip on reciprocity? What will Diogenes do to the honest man when he catches him?

It is a sad chronicle, men and brethren, and the blue points of the story are the oysters.

There is absolutely no need of sitting up at the railroad station waiting for the Sunday morning paper train. Drop in at the news agency to-day and tell the man you want to see Jeff's Sunday suit.

ROSS DEFENDS 54-HOUR BILL

Samuel Ross, State Senator from the New Bedford district, and one of the leaders in the legislative fight for the fifty-four-hour House bill, to-day outlined for the AMERICA the position of those who favor the measure urged by labor organizations.

By SAMUEL ROSS.

President of the National Spinners' Association, and Senator of Massachusetts from New Bedford.

Governor Foss should sign the fifty-four hour bill for the best interests alike of manufacturers and operatives in the Commonwealth. This bill represents twenty-five years of agitation and hoped for legislation. Signed by Governor Foss and enacted into law, the long struggle will be placed in a position to knew what to meet in the future.

There will be a cessation of agitation if the Governor signs this bill. There is the passage of a fifty-five-hour bill and its approval by the Governor will mean that next year your bills for fifty-three or fifty-two hours will be presented. And the agitation for a shorter work day will be continued. With a fifty-four-hour bill upon the statute books of the State the effort and strain of the toiler for twenty-five years, so far as working hours are concerned, will have been ended satisfactorily.

So, from the standpoint of both manufacturer and operative, Governor Foss should sign this fifty-four-hour bill. The manufacturer will have no more agitation and the operative will be satisfied.

Then there is the practical legislative side of things. Governor Foss asks me to change this bill and make it fifty-five instead of fifty-four. This can't be done. It would have to be reconsidered. Then, even if this change were to be made and this could not be brought about because the time has gone by.

The bill for fifty-six hours will not provide the relief to the toiler that is sought. Neither fifty-six hours nor fifty-five hours cut up right, as we say, in fixing the hours of daily employment. With a fifty-six or fifty-five-hour week, the manufacturer takes the time off in the morning. The operatives are called by the bell and the whistle to go to work, ten minutes later in the case of fifty-six hours and twenty minutes later in the case of fifty-five hours. But the workman's day apart from his toil, the only time he lives, is between the time he ceases work and the time he goes to bed. With a fifty-four hour bill in force, he would quit work every day at twenty minutes earlier, and would have so much more of a day to himself. This he wants. The bill for fifty-six hours will not provide our factories in some seasons of the year, the operatives see the daylight only at the noon hour. He plods to his work in the darkness of the morning and it's dark again when his toil is over.

The Governor has been misinformed from the start on this bill. He says there has been a violation of an agreement, that the advocates of a shorter week bill had agreed to a fifty-four-hour bill with the manufacturers, and that while willing to sign a fifty-four-hour bill he would not sign a fifty-four hour bill. He charges bad faith, insidery and square mealing toward the agreement. No such agreement was ever made. We'd like to know the name of the go-between who told the Governor that there was an agreement. But we can't find our why this Governor was.

In February word came to the Committee on Labor from the manufacturers that if we would make the bill a fifty-five hour bill the ten minutes saved by the toiler would be taken off in the evening. But there was no agreement and maybe the manufacturers are unfortunate in having had with the manufacturers. What labor wanted was a fifty-four hour bill, and that's what labor intends to have.

What other States have not done does not concern us here in Massachusetts. Rhode Island passed a fifty-six-hour bill six months after we did. And Rhode Island would have made it fifty-four if we had. New Jersey has had a fifty-five-hour bill for fifteen years, and will make it fifty-four. And New Jersey's silk industries haven't suffered in the least from the competition of other States, because it reduced its working hours.

Governor Foss has a plain duty to sign this bill. It will help the manufacturer and operative as well.

CHANGE CLERGY AT ST. JOHN'S

Archbishop O'Connell has made important changes in the faculty of St. John's Seminary, Brighton. According to this week's Pilot, the Sulpician Fathers, who have been in charge of the seminary since its foundation in 1884, will end their connection with it at the close of the present school year, and the diocesan clergy will then assume charge.

The archbishop gratefully referred to the excellent work the Sulpician Fathers had done, but, he said, with the growth and development of the diocese, it was right the diocese itself should take up the training of its priests.

The rector of the seminary and president of the faculty will be Rev. John B. Peterson, Ph.D., who for many years has been attached to the seminary. The other members of the faculty were announced as follows:

Rev. John B. Peterson, Ph.D., professor of moral theology.

Rev. Andrew J. O'Brien, professor of dogmatic theology.

Rev. Lee O'Neil, S.T.L., professor of sacred scripture.

Rev. Joseph C. Walsh, D.C.L., professor of canon law.

Rev. J. E. Sexton, professor of history.

Rev. P. J. Waters, Ph.D., professor of senior philosophy.

Rev. George V. Leahy, S.T.L., professor of junior philosophy.

Rev. J. F. Walsh, S.T.L., professor of science.

Rev. C. F. Crowley, professor of English history.

Rev. Charles N. Cunningham will be treasurer.

Rev. Joseph Murphy, now studying the clergy at Rome, will take a special course of studies at the Biblical Institute in Rome and later at the Biblical Institute at Jerusalem before coming to America to join the new faculty.

SAVANNAH SEEKS BIG AUTO EVENT

By J. C. KERRISON.

The representatives of the Savannah Automobile Club are due to arrive in New York within the next day or so to take up the question of the Grand Prize race for 1911. President Granger of the Savannah Club, in company with other accredited representatives, are making the trip from the Southern city by automobile and this will be the first time on record that the trip North has been made in that manner.

While Savannah is particularly anxious to secure the Grand Prize race she is not very fussy about the Vanderbilt, although she would be willing to take it were it the desire of the Automobile Club of America.

Savannah certainly wants the Grand Prize race, especially in view of the fact that she has been awarded the Light-car race for November next. It will cost but little more to get the course in shape for two events than it does for one and considering all things Savannah certainly should be awarded what she has earned in the way of the Grand Prize.

Eastern Sales Manager O. S. Tweedy of the United States Tire Company spent yesterday in Boston in company with Local Manager Ridder. The two gentlemen looked over many sites suitable for the new home for the U. S. Tire Company, it being understood that Boston is to have one of the large buildings of the company.

The present quarters at Boylston street, while large and attractive, are considered inadequate for the ever-growing business of the company.

Governor Foss, who believes in home industry and talks it to a considerable extent, has shown by his purchase of a 6-16 Locomobile that he practices what he preaches.

The Locomobile, as is well known, is a New England product, and a product of which New England can well be proud. Manager Blake anticipates making the delivery of the Governor's new car within the next few days. There will be nothing in this car different from the stock model.

Inasmuch as the National hill climb of the American Automobile Association at Wilkesbarre, Pa., does not appear on the motoring calendar this year, steps are being taken by the Yale Automobile Club and the Automobile Club of New Haven to make the Shingle Hill climb at West Haven, Conn., the National climb of 1911, sanctioned by the A. A. A. It will take place Saturday, June 10, and a galaxy of star drivers already have entered. The biggest competition ever held on that course is expected.

MRS. HARRIMAN TOURS BOSTON

In company with her youngest daughter, Carol, Mrs. Edward H. Harriman, widow of the railroad magnate, whose fortune is estimated at $100,000,000, is calling on friends and looking after various business interests in Boston today. With a score of attendants she came here from Tower Hill, her country home west of the Hudson Palisades, on her private car.

Besides being mother to five children Mrs. Harriman is manager of a New York bank and road building company.

Effective Home Remedy for Tuberculosis

It is a serious matter when the lungs are affected. A trip away or to a sanatorium is expensive, and involves separation from home. Eckman's Alterative is effective—no leaving home necessary.

231 S. Atlantic Ave., Haddonfield, N. J.

Gentlemen: "In the Fall of 1905 I contracted a very severe cold which settled on my lungs. My physician then told me I must go to California at once. Being advised to take Eckman's Alterative, I stayed at home and commenced the last week in October. The first week in January, 1906, I resumed work, fully restored to health. It is now five years since my cure has been effected."

(Signed) W. M. TATEM.

Eckman's Alterative is for Bronchitis, Asthma, Hay Fever, Throat and Lung Affections. For sale by all Rider-Jayne Stores, Houghton & Dutton Drug Dept., and other leading druggists. Ask for booklet of cured cases, and write to Eckman Laboratory, Philadelphia, Pa., for additional evidence.

$2.50 in merchandise or $2.00 in cash will be given for filled Legal Stamp books at Wolfe & McClobber's, corner Hanover and Portland streets.

URGE SCHOFIELD FOR U. S. JUDGE

Judge William Schofield of the Massachusetts Superior Court is being considered for appointment to the United States Circuit Court bench by President Taft, the circuit judgeship in the first district is vacant and Judge Schofield has been highly recommended at the White House. Congressman Robert O. Harris of the Plymouth district, who was a Superior Court judge when elected to the national House, has been called into consultation by the President and has strongly indorsed Judge Schofield for the vacancy. Judge Harris and Judge Schofield were colleagues on the Massachusetts Superior bench. Senator Lodge has conferred with President Taft on the appointment, but how he and Senator Crane stand as to Judge Schofield has not been stated. The report comes from Washington that the Massachusetts senators have taken no decided action in the matter, but it is known that they feel that Massachusetts ought to have a circuit judgeship.

The vacancy was caused by the death of Judge Lowell. Judge Lodge might have been named as his successor, but for the opposition of Attorney-General Wickersham. There is a boom in Washington for Chief Justice Parsons of New Hampshire, who is backed by the Dartmouth College alumni. The Massachusetts senators, however, will try to have the President name a Bay State man.

HARVARD YIELDS TO YALE IN HURDLE RACE

Harvard has yielded to Yale in the matter of points in the low hurdle race in last Saturday's dual games. In a letter to Professor William Lyon Phelps of Yale, William P. Garcelon, graduate treasurer of Harvard Athletic Association, says that the Harvard members of the cup committee are unanimous in the opinion that the points should be counted as determined by the real race in which Yale won first and Harvard second and third. The race was run over because of a misunderstanding about the start and some Harvard men dropped out. This makes the final points 59½ to 44½.

GET A FLAG FOR MEMORIAL DAY

Get a flag for Memorial Day.

The great patriotic holiday will be here in less than a fortnight. You need a flag for your home, to show that you are a patriot.

The AMERICAN is giving a beautiful specimen of the Stars and Stripes under conditions within the reach of all.

Readers all know how to get a flag. The recipe is simple, thus:

"Seven coupons of consecutive dates and thirty-five cents."

Was there ever an easier and cheaper way to obtain a splendid specimen of the Stars and Stripes, a well-made, handsome flag, worth $1.50 if it is worth a cent.

There is no waiting in line at the Flag Department, no delay. The flags are all ready for you, nicely wrapped up. If ordered by mail they will come in stout fiber-paper envelopes.

Applicants should understand clearly that all mail orders must be addressed to Flag Department, Boston American, P. O. Box 3047, Boston.

The AMERICAN is not responsible for money sent through the mail in any form other than Postoffice money order or check. Do not send cash through the mail. Do not send stamps.

The flag which the AMERICAN gives under this order is of solid woven bunting of highest grade, with colors absolutely fast. The stripes are sewed throughout with double rows of stitching and the corners are solidly fastened. A heavy canvas border, with large brass grommets for ropes, completes it.

For the convenience of AMERICAN readers who live in Providence flags may be obtained from the special AMERICAN agent in Providence, Max Silverstein, at No. 23 Canal street. He will redeem flag coupons which are BROUGHT to his store, but will supply no mail orders. ALL mail orders must be sent to the Flag Department, P. O. Box 3047, Boston.

YALE CREW LEAVES FOR PRINCETON RACE

NEW HAVEN, Ct., May 18.—The Yale crew left at 6:05 this afternoon for Princeton where for the first time in the history of Yale aquatics they will race the crews of Princeton and Cornell tomorrow. Yale will row in the following order:

1, Frost (captain); 2, Field; 3, Romeyn; 4, Publin; 5, Scully; 6, Van Sinderen; 7, Van Blarcom; 8, Howe; coxswain, Barnum. The makeup shows several changes. Howe taking Van Sinderen's place at stroke, Van Sinderen replacing Oldenburg at 6, and Scully rowing in place of Adams at 5.

GALVIN REPLIES TO DOCTORS' BAN

Dr. George W. Galvin was to-day expelled from the Massachusetts Medical Society.

The trial board which heard charges of unprofessional conduct preferred against the physician adjudged him guilty and unanimously recommended his expulsion. The offence which incurred the displeasure of the society was his publication of an advertisement for a medical remedy.

Dr. Galvin received the notice of his expulsion early to-day. He stated that there was no appeal possible, but that he might take the matter to the courts.

"I anticipated this action, said Dr. Galvin, "so that I am not surprised. The committee were compelled to take this action or ignore the by-laws of the society. If the medical society ceased to grow after the by-laws were written I did not, and with a full knowledge of the facts, my opinion will agree that the action which brought about this trouble was not unprofessional.

"I merely announced to the world that a new remedy had been found for blood poison. I announced it to the thousands of persons whom I had treated in my thirty-three years of practice and I stated plainly that the remedy could be obtained at any of the hospitals or from any reputable physician. There was no attempt on my part to make it a close corporation. My only desire was that the public be acquainted with the discovery.

"The leaders of this society are equally as guilty as myself if any conduct is considered unprofessional. The big physicians of Boston constantly practice a method of advertising which is open only to a favored few. They are exploited through the newspapers and medical journals and the attempt is made to expel them."

The trial board which heard the evidence against Dr. Galvin consisted of Drs. Frank M. Sherman, Fred T. Murphy, G. W. Tinkham, Ernest S. Jack and James E. Simpson.

MISS FIRTH TO WED IN LONDON

Miss Pauline Firth, prominent in the younger set of Brookline and Boston, and one of the star golfers of the Brookline Country Club, is to be married shortly to Richard Haworth at St. George's, Hanover Square, London. Miss Firth is the daughter of William Firth, president of the William Firth Company, cotton and worsted machinery manufacturers, with an office at No. 79 Milk street. The Firths occupy one of the handsomest mansions in the Chestnut Hill district, and are prominent in society.

During the whole of her life Miss Firth has been of an athletic turn of mind and is one of the most enthusiastic of the women golfers at the Brookline Country Club. She has played in many local and out-of-town club tournaments, and has won many trophies. She is accounted as one of the best golfers at the Country Club.

Though it is admitted by the family that the marriage is soon to take place in London, the date is being kept secret at present. It has been known among the younger set for some time, however, that the wedding would soon take place, and it is believed that it will be celebrated during Coronation Week.

MUSGROVE GRANITE STATE AUDITOR

CONCORD, N. H., May 18.—The Governor and Council named Frank A. Musgrove of Hanover, Speaker of the House of Representatives, to be State auditor, to fill the vacancy caused by the transfer of Judge William B. Fellows of Tilton to the Tax Commission by the Supreme Court.

SHOE STITCHER IS AN HEIRESS

Miss Angie Norman of No. 20 Silsbee street, Lynn, learned to-day that she had fallen heir to nearly $50,000 left by Miss Mary Pray, a wealthy resident of Augusta, Me. Miss Norman has for twenty years been employed as a stitcher in various Lynn shops, and during that time has been the sole support of an invalid sister. This factor which she has just fallen heir to will enable her to spend the remainder of her days in peace and comfort.

Miss Mary Pray had no near relatives, and it is learned had always admired Miss Norman for her life of self-sacrifice and devotion. She determined to reward her according. Miss Norman, who was entirely unprepared for the stroke of good luck, left for Augusta to-day to claim her fortune.

TAFT SHAKES UP SNOBBISH CLUB

By JOHN TEMPLE GRAVES.

WASHINGTON, May 18.—Since Andrew Jackson, in 1832, flung the social status of Peggy O'Neill as a firebrand into his Cabinet and among the exclusive circles of the Senate, Washington has known no sensation in a social way more striking and picturesque than the fiery denunciation which the President of the United States laid by imputation upon the Metropolitan Club of Washington and upon the Union League of New York.

The President was speaking to the Eighth Street Jewish Temple to a meeting held under the auspices of B'nai B'rith. He had paid a distinguished tribute to the Jews of America and to the Jews of the district.

Then, suddenly, the President shot this startling paragraph into the social life of Washington:

"I believe, and I am proud of the fact, that the Jews in America enjoy an equality that they have in only a few other countries of the world.

"Small-Brained and Narrow-Minded."

"I don't mean to say that there are no racial prejudices here; I don't mean to say that there are not social clubs and other places where the small-headed men who occasionally get into a directory manifest their greatness by using a blackball and shutting out men of importance in the community; but my friends while it is aggravating and exasperating, still it is not the worst thing that could happen.

"I have had it happen to friends of mine —Gentiles—who have been kept out of clubs by people who are not worthy to button up their shoes, and who have no standing save in clubs. It is aggravating, I agree, but a man is what he is by reason of his respect for himself and he knows that someone who affects to snub him and look down upon him is not worthy—if he knows that the person is not his equal, and if he cultivates any of the philosophy that he ought to call to his aid—he will have the advantage over his small-brained and narrow-minded critic always."

Loeb and Littleton.

The President himself is not promiscuous in his social life. He has been known to draw the line and firmly, too, in the life of the White House.

What Mr. Taft said at the Jewish Temple was scarcely comprehended in its full sense by those who heard it. But its importance was soon felt. There can be no question of what the President had in mind.

The rejection of William Loeb, Jr., Collector of the Port of New York, by the Union League Club upon a question of race alone had scarcely passed as a national incident before Washington was stirred over the rejection of Martin Littleton's proposal for membership in the Metropolitan Club.

Promptly upon the heel of these events comes the resignation of General Clarence R. Edwards, chief of the Bureau of Insular Affairs, from the Board of Governors of the Metropolitan; Captain Templin M. Potts of the United States Army follows with his resignation from the Board, and Lieutenant-Colonel Charles L. Mcawley of the United States Marine Corps, secretary of the club, makes the third official resignation.

Would Blackball Hughes.

Associate Justice Hughes, of the Supreme Court, has incurred the enmity of three members of the Metropolitan Club, who informed a friend recently that they would "take pleasure in blackballing Mr. Hughes if at any time his name was presented for membership to the club." Their opposition was based on the fight made on the race tracks of New York when Justice was Governor of that State. The three members are interested in horses. Justice Hughes's name, however, has not been proposed to the club.

PORTLAND PLANS $250,000 SCHOOL

PORTLAND, Me., May 18.—Plans for a new high school building to replace that ruined by fire yesterday, and to cost at least $250,000, were discussed last night by Mayor Oakley C. Curtis and other city officials. A number of temporary locations for the 500 pupils, including a theatre, have been tendered and will be duly considered. Chief Eldredge said an investigation showed the fire started in a network of electrical wires which were under the principal's office on the ground floor.

HEARST SPEAKS TO SOLONS

AT ALBANY URGES PASSAGE OF INCOME TAX AND DIRECT PRIMARY BILLS.

ALBANY, N. Y., May 18.—Upon invitation of the Democratic Senators and of Senator Dubanel of the Independence party, William Randolph Hearst tonight addressed the members of the Legislature in the Capitol, speaking on the income Tax resolution and the Direct Primary bill now under consideration by that body. He said:

"I am greatly honored by the invitation that you have extended me to address you.

"I appreciate most highly the distinction which is conferred upon me.

"But I have not accepted your invitation merely for the honor it brings, but for the opportunity it affords.

"I have come before you to express for myself and I believe for a million voters of this mighty State the hope that this Legislature will crown its commendable career by passing the income tax resolution and an honest and effective direct primary law.

"There two questions were the dominant questions of the last campaign.

"They were in the minds of all men; they were in the platforms of all parties; they were in the pledges of all candidates. They were and they are the main measures which this Legislature was elected to transcribe into law.

Two-Fold Obligation.

"The obligation upon the Legislature to make these measures law is two-fold. First, the obligation to carry out the expressed will of the people, and, second, the obligation to perform an act which is essentially just and right and necessary.

"The income tax is a matter of elemental justice.

"The first principle and the only just principle of taxation is that a man should pay in proportion to what he possesses and enjoys.

"Taxation is merely an assessment to maintain the conditions which make possible the possession of property, the accumulating of wealth, the enjoyment of income.

"Certainly the contribution to maintain these civilized conditions should be in proportion to benefits derived under them—in proportion to the property possessed, the wealth accumulated and the income enjoyed.

"It is obvious that regular incomes can be earned because of the civilized conditions created by organized society, just as property can be possessed in peace and wealth accumulated in safety because of these conditions.

"It is equally obvious, therefore, that a toll upon incomes levied by government is quite as just, rightful and reasonable as the toll levied upon any accumulation or occupation, upon any property or privilege dependent upon the continuance of civilized conditions.

Savors Least of Confiscation.

"One eminent reformist, Mr. John D. Rockefeller, is reported to have said that the income tax is confiscation.

"All taxation is confiscation in a sense. It is confiscation by the State to maintain the State. It is confiscation of a small part of the possessions of the individual in order to protect the remainder of the possessions of the individual.

"In taxation to maintain government the man who benefits most is the man who possesses most.

"And any man of wealth who avoids just taxation is a defaulter in his duty to the State, a repudiator of his obligation to society.

"Of all taxation, that which savors least of confiscation is the tax which falls upon the ample income of the rich, and that which savors most of confiscation is the tax which falls upon the scant possessions of the poor.

"It is a singular thing, a deplorable thing, that the men who have made the greatest fortunes through governmental favoritism and preferment and who are most willing to spend those fortunes in personal advantage and advertisement often refuse to perform the commonest duties of citizenship or to pay their rightful proportion of taxation.

Selfish Motives of Opponents.

"Such men violently oppose the income tax, but are unwilling to disclose the sordid and selfish motives that govern their opposition.

"They put forward agents to advance arguments which are specious and fallacious.

"Of such inspiration and such a character is the statement that State and municipal securities will be unfavorably affected by the right to tax income from whatever source derived.

"If we are all sufficiently satisfied with the position which State and municipal securities now occupy in relation to other securities we can rest absolutely assured that their relative position will not be disturbed by a blanket tax levied upon them and all other securities equally and impartially.

"If Mr. Smith is taller than Mr. Jones upon the floor of this House, then Mr. Smith is taller than Mr. Jones when standing upon this platform or upon any level elevation or any level depression.

"If State and municipal bonds bear a certain definite relation to other securities under present conditions, then State and municipal bonds will maintain the same definite relation to other securities, with exact equality.

Human Rights Most Important.

"As insurance in source and false in character are the arguments addressed to the State's rights sentiment among members of this Legislature. There is neither veracity nor sincerity that the State's rights are affected in any way by a Federal income tax. But even if State's rights were affected there is no true Lincoln Republican or Jeffersonian Democrat who will consider State's rights of as much importance as human rights.

"If the rights of human rights cannot better be advanced than by placing a just proportion of taxation upon the broad shoulders of the rich and lifting part of the undue weight of taxation from the burdened backs of the poor.

"Direct nominations are also a matter of popular rights and of fundamental principles.

"Government by the people means government by representatives whom the people elect.

"The right of a citizen to vote involves the right to choose the candidate for whom he shall vote.

"In modern machine government, which in some sections has largely supplanted popular government, the citizens do not choose their own candidates.

Opposed to Machine Government.

"The 'Boss' appoints the candidates, the convention confirms the appointment and the citizen on election day merely go through the formality of ratifying the action of one or the other political machine.

"I oppose that kind of government. I rebel against that kind of malevolent despotism.

"I object to 'Boss' rule, and you object to 'Boss' rule, and every honest, independent representative of the people objects to 'Boss' rule.

"We revere a leader, but we resent a 'Boss.' We are ready to be led, but we are unwilling either to be driven or deluded.

"We want our commissions from the people, we want our approval of the people.

"We want to render our service to the citizens and receive our reward from the citizens. We want to perform our political duties according to the dictates of our own consciences, and not according to the dictation of a conscienceless political 'boss.'

"Boss rule debauches the Commonwealth, degrades the public officials, defrauds the citizen.

"You members of this Legislature are empowered to end 'Boss' rule. You have been asked by your fellow citizens to end it. You have been pledged by your parties to end it.

"If you fail to end it, you are false to the spirit of this republic, false to your own pledges, false to your fellow citizens, false even to your own best interests.

How to End "Boss" Rule.

"In order to end it, you have only to carry out the platforms on which you were elected.

"You can end it by doing merely what you were elected to do—give the people an honest direct primary law and restore to the people their rights to a free choice and a fair ballot.

"Progress is being made to-day in this republic of ours. Make your part of that progress.

"History is being made to-day in this republic of ours. Make your part of that history.

"The people are coming into their own, and their own is growing.

"Do not fail through lack of full confidence in the people. Do not fail through lack of fair dealing with the people.

"Give the people a fair and complete direct primary law, not a miserable makeshift masquerading as a direct primary. Give them a primary law which will include personal registration through the State, direct nomination and election of all elected public officials, an official primary ballot, a secret voting equipment, and a stringent corrupt practice act strictly limiting the expenditure of money.

"Do not fear to go too far. The most radical bill before this Legislature is not as radical as the laws which are already in successful operation in many of the State of Iowa.

Right Will Triumph.

"You are mainly party men. I speak to you as an independent and for independents. We are independents because we think more of our principles than we do of party lines, just give us an honest primary and we can fight for our principles with party lines.

"Deny us an honest primary and we must fight from without until we win—and eventually we will win.

"Nothing is more inevitable than the eventual triumph of a righteous cause. A right denied is merely a right deferred. We have the fullest confidence that the reform measures now before the Legislature will surely be passed either by you or by successors.

"In all sincerity and friendship I urge you to pass them for the advantage of your citizens and the ultimate advantage of yourselves. For that I cannot believe you have shown the slightest regard for your own glory and to the public good."

NEW SHUBERT SHOW COMING

"The Kiss Waltz," which is to open at the Shubert on Saturday evening, will have its first performance at New Haven this evening, where it will be viewed by a representative audience, as well as by all of the important executives in the Shubert organization. "The Kiss Waltz" is proclaimed as one of the most striking and successful of the late Viennese productions, and the American version is expected to repeat the triumph of the several European productions. The music is by C. H. Vichner, composer of "Mlle. Mischief," and is said to be agreeable in every particular. For the production that will come to Boston the Shuberts have provided an exceptional cast.

* * *

Norumbega Park will open its fifteenth season next Sunday, and a number of surprises are promised, among which is the grape arbor restaurant. The regular vaudeville and musical comedy performances in the open air theatre will be resumed next Monday.

* * *

The third month of "The Commuters" at the Park season will end next Saturday and interest in the play remains undiminished. "The Commuters" has already enjoyed all of the plays that were in town when it arrived and has the record of the season in long engagements.

* * *

With the retirement of "The Arcadians" from the Colonial Theatre after Saturday's performances a notable engagement will be brought to an end. After an unusually successful visit early in the season "The Arcadians" has brought back for a return engagement, which has been extended two weeks beyond the original booking plans in order to keep pace with the demand for seats.

The return of Donald Meek to Mr. Craig's Castle Square Company will doubtless be made a happy occasion next Monday by his many friends among Mr. Craig's patrons. Mr. Meek's return to the stock game on his own account in Lowell was satisfactory, but he had promised to be here with the original booking plans in order to keep pace with the demand for seats.

ASK TAFT TO END ALL BOYCOTTS

NEW YORK, May 18.—An appeal to President Taft to end the boycott for all time by seeking the punishment or dissolution of organizations enforcing it, is made by the National Association of Manufacturers.

It declares the American Federation of Labor was "presently prosecuting and intending to prosecute further such boycotts." Resolutions were adopted requesting the President to investigate the association's grievances through the department of justice.

A resolution was adopted condemning the federal eight-hour law as "uneconomic, tedious and dangerous." The association pledged itself to continue to stand by the open shop. Resolutions were also adopted urging that workmen be compensated by the State for injuries sustained in accidents; that an international court of arbitration be established, and that the American merchant marine be aided.

ONE MEAL IN SIX MONTHS

Living on air is a reality for an animal arriving yesterday on the Satsuma from the Far East. It is a tortoise believed to be more than 100 years old, belonging to Chief Engineer Cook of the big freighter. It is a mystery to all hands on the Satsuma how the creature lives. Once in the six months he has been on the ship he ate a bit of banana.

MRS. TAFT ON HER WAY HOME

NEW YORK, May 18.—So weak that she had to be assisted at every step, and with a trained nurse constantly in attendance, Mrs. Taft to-day left the home of her brother-in-law, Henry W. Taft, at No. 30 West Forty-eighth street, for Washington.

She was taken up an automobile to the Pennsylvania Railroad station and put on board the private coach Ideal. A good sized crowd gathered in the street to watch her departure.

RUNAWAY AUTO RAMS A CAR

WORCESTER, May 18.—A runaway automobile, started on a career of destruction by a collision with a trolley car on Park avenue, cut loose in the neighborhood later throwing out the chauffeur, tore down a fence and rooted up front lawn until it crashed into a big artificial stone fleur pot sunk in the yard of Arthur McCary at No. 401 Park avenue. There it was piled up in a mass of twisted iron and splintered woodwork.

MINOT EXPECTS PARK SQ. SALE

Laurence Minot, of the Park Square Real Estate Trust, said to-day that the New Haven railroad would probably sell the Park square property, the transfer of which was declared invalid.

"It may be that the officials of the railroad company will ask us to sell it for them in the manner indicated by the court's decision as lawful," said Mr. Minot. "The men who composed the Park Square Real Estate Trust, however, will not, as an association, buy the property for development.

DOUBLE LEGAL STAMPS MORNINGS

Wearing Trusses Like These Is Simply Slow Suicide

No Need To Let Torturing Belts, Elastic Bands, Springs or Leg-straps Make Your Life Miserable

Don't spend another cent on your rupture until you write us and get our free book of advice—

It will save you from throwing any more money away on worthless trusses—makeshifts which do no good—the belt, elastic and spring contraptions sold by druggists and local truss dealers.

Thousands of sufferers have wasted dollar after dollar—have endured needless misery—have been made helpless by rupture—have had their lives shortened—simply because they didn't know the facts you'll find in this book.

Took 40 Years To Write

This remarkable book—cloth bound, 64 pages, 20 separate articles and 19 photographic pictures—took us 40 years to write—took us that long to find out all the facts we've put in it—facts never before published.

It explains just why ordinary trusses make life miserable for, everybody who wears them—but why they do little or no good, even when drawn so tight you can scarcely stand to keep them—how they squeeze the rupture, often causing strangulation—how they often bring on heart disorders, stomach trouble, etc.—how wearing them is simply slow suicide.

It explains why druggists should no more be allowed to sell rupture than a shoemaker would be allowed to perform an operation.

Tells how ruptured people are every year handed out of hundreds of thousands of dollars—explains the fraudulent claims of "Lumbers," "methods," "appliances," "discoveries," "devices," "plaster jackets," etc.

Explains why operation results in permanent weakness or death oftener than in cure.

Explains why the rupture is in danger of the Cluthe Rupture Institute has found a simple way to relieve and cure rupture without operation—without keeping you in bed a single day—a way you can get well while working (old along—while you keep on earning money—a way you can try without risking a single penny.

Get Well While Working

Our free book explains why rupture is bound to get worse all the time unless constantly kept from coming out—just as a broken bone can't knit unless the parts are held securely together.

It explains how the Cluthe Automatic Massager—the greatest boon to the ruptured the world has ever known—is guaranteed to keep your rupture from coming out, or no charge—

Guaranteed to hold all day long and every day—when you are working and all other times.

Book explains how the Cluthe Automatic Massager is far more than merely a device to hold your rupture in place—

Explains how it provides the only way ever discovered for overcoming the weakness which is the real cause of rupture—

How it does that by giving a soothing, strengthening massage to the weak ruptured parts—all entirely automatically—all without any attention whatever from you.

How it never chafes, irritates, self-adjusting—held in position by the—no straps, belts, elastic bands, body springs or leg-straps.

Curing Begins the First Day

Book explains how this curing massage—which strengthens just as exercise strengthens weak arms or legs—is so remarkably beneficial, so remarkably curative, that in 100 cases out of every 200 it begins to relieve the rupture from the day a Cluthe Automatic Massager is first worn.

So remarkably beneficial that the Cluthe Automatic Massager has cured thousands of people who had been ruptured over 50 years.

Try It Without Risking A Penny

Book explains how we have so much faith in the Cluthe Automatic Massager—we have seen it do wonders for so many others—that we want to prove—especially for you—that you can get relief by trying it at our risk, just what it can do for you.

We'll give you plenty of time to test it—if it doesn't keep your rupture from coming out—if you don't get better right from the first—then it won't cost you a single penny.

Our free book gives hundreds of letters—voluntarily written—and names and addresses of over a thousand people—mostly some of the best in your neighborhood—who have tried the Cluthe Automatic Massager and want you to know about it.

Don't let yourself keep on getting worse—don't let makeshift trusses keep you in misery—find out, as told in this book, how you can end rupture misery, now, you can get well while working.

Don't fail to get this book—simply say in a letter or postal, "Send me the book." Address—

Box 20—CLUTHE INSTITUTE,
125 East 23rd Street, New York City

RUSTLERS TACKLE CARDINALS TO-DAY IN NEW SERIES

CARDINALS OPEN NEW SERIES WITH RUSTLERS

By R. W. LARDNER.

Gentlemen, the Cardinals, Roger Bresnahan's team of youngsters and oldsters, open a series of four games at the South End grounds this afternoon. These Cards have met with indifferent success so far on their Eastern travels, but they have been making a much better showing than Fred Tenney's club can boast of.

Mr. Bresnahan himself is under the weather. One of the New York games was such a frost, from a St. Louis standpoint, that Roger caught cold participating in it. He took to his bed, but may be able to arise and lead his brave warriors in one or two of the battles here.

The old part of the Cardinal team is to be seen in the field and batting, but doesn't mean aged in this case, but old in point of service. The veterans are Miller Huggins at second base, Ed Konetchy at first, Mike Mowrey at third and Ellis Brown and Cullen in the pastures. Things are different in the pitching corps. Harry Taylor, the strategist, and Roy Stockton are the only two St. Louis hurlers who have been in the big leagues more than one season. Roger released all the rest of his vet pitchers and Eddie Phelps, ancient catcher, to-day and Labor Day and New Year's. To needer him in the catching line is no job for Jack Rowe, who has been a Cardinal quite awhile, and young Wingo, who has a couple of games and little chance to show whether he deserves it or not. Aside from Rowe and Hannon, the box staff boasts of Golden, Laudermilk, Steele, Zwilch, Meyer and one or two others.

Down in the Cellar.

The Cards are now in sixth place. It will be a hard job for the Rustlers to oust them this trip, but it will help a lot if the locals win games come Bostonward.

Just at present these same Rustlers are resting in the cellar, as a result of yesterday's doings here and in Brooklyn. Without even trying to flatter them in the least we will say that they do not belong in last place and won't be there long unless all the luck in the league goes in cahoots against them. They possess class enough to finish ahead of one or two other clubs we could name and class usually tells in the long run.

Public Likes Hitting.

The public likes hitting, but there isn't a double event it was averted. An occasional slugging match is a treat but events come to be such when they are daily occurrence. The chief objection to the hard hitting games of this Spring is that they lasted too long. Hugs would stand two hours of continuous action, but the delays attendant on changing pitchers and threatening to change them were exasperating.

Scotty Ingerton's home run, which tied the score in the tenth inning yesterday, brought the total up to 30 for ten games at the local park. This is an average of two to the game. Something became when the cause appeared true. It was made off Leffy Leifield and was a bet your new suit that Leffy got a call for pitching a ball that he hoped plunked third baseman.

The game was a seesaw and full of thrills. It was unfortunate that Charley Herzog, who made a home run inside the park in the pastime and whose precious doings had been brilliant, should have been responsible for the tally that finally gave the Pirates victory in the first half of the twelfth. With one out in the round Tommy Leach doubled to right. Manager Clarke popped to Bill Bergen and everything was up to Honus Wagner, who had engaged a double and a drive over the fence. Curtis persuaded Honus to send a bounder down Herzog's way. Herz grabbed it nicely, but made a sad throw past Tenney and Clarke, running for Leach, raced across the plate. Boston was kicked because Ingerton didn't have a turn at bat in the locals' final round.

How They Did It.

The Pirates scored in the second inning on singles by J. Miller and Hunter and Gibson's sacrifice fly. The Rustlers tied it up in the third on the doubles of Stevens and Josh Clarke. Wagner's home run over the left field opened the Pirate scoring sixth. Then Dots Miller singled again and tallied on Wilson's two base smash. Boston took the lead in its half inning, singled out and rode in on Herzog's bounder. Ingerton walked and Miller forced him. Goode counted Dots with a triple to left centre. The Pirates came right back in the seventh and tied again. With two gone, Wagner doubled and counted on Miller's third single.

The battle raged mightily thereafter until the tenth. Perry was taken out after the Boston sixth and Leifield was his successor. Curtis gave the Pirates a start in said tenth by wounding Hunter. Wilson beat out a bunt and Gibson drove out Miller. Leifield surprised himself by holding to right centre and two runs scored.

But the Rustlers were not yet dead. Two went out in their half before Herzog was hit by a pitched ball. The crowd ordered Ingerton in to score the fence and he obeyed implicitly. Howard Camnitz pitched the eleventh and twelfth for the Pirates and wasn't harmed a bit.

SOMERVILLE K. OF C. ORGANIZES A TEAM

The Mount Benedict Council, K. of C., of Somerville, is to be represented on the diamond by one of the fastest semi-pro teams in the State. Cleo O'Donnell has been engaged as coach and has gathered material at hand. Among the well-known candidates are Holy Cross: Vincent McLaughlin, formerly of Holy Cross; Vincent Donahue, catcher of the Virginia College team; Bill Sherry, former Hall school star; Mercersburg Academy crack; "Jinks" Holland, crack southpaw, and Brigham, the recent Lawrence recruit. Carrigan, who was cried out by Lynn this year, will play first base. Joseph T. Cotter is manager and already has arranged a long schedule, with but few open dates. Friday evening, May 20, the team will have a May party and dance at Eberle Hall, Somerville.

Business Notice.

YOU CAN'T LOSE WITH THIS BOOK

There is something doing in baseball all the time. That's what makes it the greatest of all games. You have to keep posted on it if you want to be up-to-date.

The best way to keep posted is to have a baseball guide. A guide has been compiled by experts that contains just the information you are likely to want. The Boston Sunday AMERICAN has arranged to give a copy of this baseball guide away free with every copy of the AMERICAN next Sunday. It will cost Boston Sunday AMERICAN readers nothing.

It is a book of 190 pages, well printed and bound. It contains:

All the facts and statistics of last Fall's world's championship series.

The complete statistics, club and individual, of the American, National, New England, Eastern, Connecticut and all the other principal baseball leagues. These statistics cover every department and feature of the game.

All the facts of interest in league baseball—past and present.

The complete official rules of league baseball, brought up to date.

All of the odd things about baseball that have happened in years.

The official schedules of the American, National, New England, Eastern, Connecticut and the other principal baseball leagues.

The contents of this book have been compiled by the best experts in baseball. It is well written, in such a way that you cannot help but understand and be interested.

It won't cost you a cent to get this guide. You will buy the Boston Sunday AMERICAN anyway—almost everybody does—and you will get the best Sunday newspaper in New England. Only two Sunday papers in the world have a larger circulation. That speaks for itself. Besides that you will get the baseball guide.

The guide is in addition to the most complete and interesting sporting section that is published anywhere. It is free (for the coupon) with next Sunday's Boston AMERICAN.

DARTMOUTH STARTS FOR PRINCETON MEET

HANOVER, N. H., May 18.—The final practice has been held by the Dartmouth track squad. "Hack" Smith's knee is much better and he will enter in the hurdles. A mass meeting of the college was held in College Hall to get men to go down with the team in large delegation will go and cheer the team on. Coach Hillman puts Dartmouth's total score at forty-eight, and is betting that the team will make between forty-five and fifty.

To-day, on the 11.19, the squad leaves for Springfield. It will put up at Green Gold Hotel.

CHICAGO, May 18.—Patsy Donovan and his Red Sox are in Chicago to-day determined to stop the mad rush of the White Sox. They open a four game series on the South Side this afternoon and, though Donovan hoods Comiskey's new outfit may be, he expects his team to take at least two of the four games scheduled to be played.

He is going to send a new pitcher against the Chicago jays never batted faced, against the Sox in Athletic. The latter worked a few innings at Detroit the other day and made [illegible]

Donovan is figuring on giving him a regular turn on the slab in the future.

Donovan is not but one wist disappointed, by the defeat of his men at Detroit. He lost three games in the run, said Patsy, and that is not such a bad showing. The Tigers are in good shape and I expect them to strike another winning streak.

"I think the White Sox as they stand to-day are one of the strongest teams in the country. They just got through trimming the World's champions four straight games and that is no easy task. Notes Gathered Between Innings

There are eight straight defeats in the Rustlers' record now.

Wilbur Goode and Bill Sweeney got back into the game yesterday. Both of them did things at bat.

Carey, the young Pirate who scored the winning run for Pittsburg, was with the South Bend team last year and helped win the Central League. He is studying theology, and [illegible] a side issue.

Jack Spratt and Arthur Butler got into the affair as pinch hitters. Neither of them helped the cause.

The crowd breathed a sigh of relief when Wagner sent his easy bounder toward Herzog in the twelfth. It turned to a groan when Hersy uncorked his wild heave.

Peaches Graham started to do the catching, but a foul tip from J. Miller's bat by the fourth spoil a finger and he retired in favor of Rariden.

The abundance of rubbers on the coaching boards in the box [illegible] attracted the attention of the boys, who had been accustomed to looking at Qs, 7s and 13s.

Owen Perry, the pitcher who worked the first six rounds, went to the Pirates from Jersey City. One would think he would have ferried over to New York.

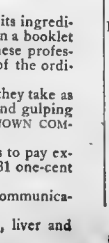
The Modesty of Women



Naturally makes them shrink from the indelicate questions, the obnoxious examinations, and unpleasant local treatments, which some physicians consider essential in the treatment of diseases of women. Yet, if help can be had, it is better to submit to this ordeal than let the disease grow and spread. The trouble is that so often the woman undergoes all the annoyance and shame for nothing. Thousands of women who have been cured by Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription write in appreciation of the cure which dispenses with the examinations and local treatments. There is no other medicine so sure and safe for delicate women as "Favorite Prescription." It cures debilitating drains, irregularity and female weakness. It always helps. It almost always cures.

"Favorite Prescription" is strictly non-alcoholic, non-secret, all its ingredients being printed on its bottle-wrapper; contains no deleterious or habit-forming drugs, and every native medicinal root entering into its composition has the full endorsement of these most eminent in the several schools of medical practice.

Some of the numerous and strongest of professional endorsements of its ingredients will be found in a pamphlet wrapped around the bottle, also in a booklet mailed free on request, by Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y. These professional endorsements should have far more weight than any amount of the ordinary lay, or non-professional testimonials.

The most intelligent women now-a-days insist on knowing what they take as medicine instead of opening their mouths like a lot of young birds and gulping down whatever is offered them. "Favorite Prescription" is of KNOWN COMPOSITION. It makes weak women strong and sick women well.

Dr. Pierce's Medical Adviser is sent free on receipt of stamps to pay expense of mailing only. Send to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y., 31 one-cent stamps for cloth-bound copy.

If sick consult the Doctor, free of charge, by letter. All such communications are held sacredly confidential.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets invigorate and regulate stomach, liver and bowels. Sugar-coated, tiny granules, easy to take as candy.

FIRST DEFEAT FOR HARVARD

By TED PARKE.

Har ard's first defeat of the season on its home grounds yesterday afternoon by the Nine in the opening game of the baseball series was wholly due to the wonderful pitching of Walter Johnson. The big fellow was invincible from his delivery to the first batter the two winning runs were scored. Harvard losing eventually after a great uphill fight, 3 to 2.

Harvard certainly gave a splendid exhibition of its ability to come back in the ninth but there was no need of it had the fielding yesterday. Harvard got two singles in the first inning and scored on a stolen steal for a sacrifice and a long fly to the outfield.

Once or twice Harvard went up in the air as they should and those men takes root and the Old Standard been able to play the ball they are. Bernat it is pretty safe to say that the score would have been more one sided. Fielding only allowed one error on the ball he did retire. Harvard for that matter wasn't up to it. It was a case of getting the hits when needed but the Crimson failed to bunch the safe ones and got out.

The Roger Wolcott A. A. of Boston, probably the most sought after baseball team in New England has completed its schedule to arrange games with only fast first class and professional teams, barring a good attraction or two away from home.

Fitch Gallagher was signed with Lawrence yesterday. Fitzsimmons's release was received from Providence and Wolcott signed the following players: Hall, Lynn; Sullivan, Roberts of Hyde Park and Stoughton and Assacos of the New Hopedales. Catcher Shea and Wolcott pitcher Joe Desmond who played with Shoemaker in the intermediate league. Besides the above will meet such fast teams as Charles Davis of Bellingham second baseman of the Stoughton and Bridgewater, third. Hendricks La Rue and Nelson who received a record with Hathaway, will make up a hard hitting outfield. Teams looking to book games address William Enright, manager Roger Wolcott A. A. 8 B. T. Married Life the Second Year

By MABEL HERBERT URNER

Helen Sends Herself a Birthday Present and Pretends It Is From Warren

THE [illegible]
St. Louis, Mo.

Gentlemen—Enclosed find ten dollars, for which please send a box of long stemmed American Beauty roses, express prepaid, to Mrs. Warren Curtis, Cartersdown, Mo. Please send with the roses the card I am sending with this.

Please send at once as I need it greatly oblige,

H. L. CURTIS.

HELEN read the letter after she had finished [illegible] three times.

At first she had signed her full name, and then the thought of the florist wondering at a woman sending flowers to herself made her change it to only her initials, which might mean any number of her family.

She carefully enclosed the ten dollar bill, sealed and addressed the envelope and took it to the post office herself.

When she had finally dropped it in the box, she walked home slowly, the color still burning in her face. It was one thing to do a thing like that, and another thing to confess it afterward.

But they couldn't!

The flowers would come to-morrow or at least the day after. She would open them with pretended surprise and delight, and find Warren's card, and they would think he had not forgotten her birthday after all!

To-day, the fifteenth, was her birthday. Ever since yesterday morning she had been waiting with tense eagerness for some present from Warren. Nothing had come—not even a letter. And she felt now that nothing would come.

"They Mustn't Know," She Said

At any cost she would not let her family know that he cared so little. Most of last night she had lain awake thinking of what she would do if [illegible] in the morning. And it was in the middle of the night when all our thoughts and plans are most daring, that she had conceived of this—of herself ordering some flowers and pretending they were from him.

At least she would save her pride before her people. Whatever sense of humiliation she would feel in her own heart, they should not know of his indifference and neglect.

To all women of Helen's nature money is of no value where their happiness is concerned. And while she would have economized in many small ways to save ten dollars, she had enclosed this bill in the envelope without the slightest sense of regret.

And yet she had only fifteen dollars besides the money for her return ticket.

But not once did she stop to consider that, nor even the fact that she might have to write Warren for money, which she did not wish to do.

She had thought of only one thing—that her people should not guess how [illegible]

[illegible] and had forgotten or ignored her birthday.

Their family was one in which the birthdays were always observed and made much of. Last year they had sent her a [illegible] Boston filled with many loving remembrances. And this morning she had found at her plate a beautiful embroidered centerpiece from her mother, a white [illegible] sweater from Aunt Mollie, a five-dollar gold piece from her father and several other remembrances from relatives and friends.

"What Will Warren Send?"

"I wonder what Warren will send?" Aunt Mollie had asked innocently.

"I haven't any idea, but he always does something lovely," Helen answered, setting herself for the lie as she told it.

And when nothing came that day she knew they were wondering why. With a sort of grim triumph she waited for the morning when she felt sure the flowers she had ordered would arrive.

And they did. When the long white box was brought her, she opened it with all the surprise and delight she had planned. Under the tissue paper was War[illegible] card, which she had directed the florist to enclose. And the roses were beautiful.

"They came all the way from Boston as fresh as that?" her mother asked wonderingly.

"Oh no," turning over the lid of the box, "you see they are from St. Louis. The big florists have branches in all the large cities. Warren had only to give the order to the Boston house and they telegraphed on to send them from the St. Louis branch, the nearest one to us. There must have been a delay somewhere, for I know he planned to have them reach me yesterday."

Her mother and Aunt Mollie exclaimed over their loveliness as she took the roses from the box and arranged them in two [illegible] in the sitting room.

And everyone who came in was proudly told they were Helen's birthday present from her husband. She had telegraphed on to have them sent from St. Louis.

And when Helen flushed slightly at this statement, they thought it was only from pride and pleasure.

The fragrance of the roses went through all the house. It seemed to follow Helen wherever she went—an ever-present reminder of her strategy.

And yet she had no regret. Her heart was filled with a sort of bitter exultancy.

At least if her husband did not love her—she would make her family believe that he did.

The Thoughts of a Woman

By DOROTHY DIX

WILL it is so much easier to sympathize with the real misfortunes than it is with their prosperity?

Is the truly pious know how much wickedness there is in the world.

Isn't it the name of the undertaker who buries you?

[illegible] a good many people have married a lot of the week, instead of seven.

[illegible] would be no more divorces.

A woman never knows what a poor, stark, imperfect creature she is until she gets a husband to tell her of her faults.

It is a fact that a married man will send $5 worth of flowers to an American Beauty in a new girl and consider that he has discharged his duty, and no jury in the land will quarrel with his wife over the price of a peck of potatoes.

To have suffered makes a woman either a saint or a fool, and it is a perfect mixture of both.

A man's year of indiscretion begins at forty, but his earlier commences to suggest itself long before that, and his latter lets out a wail of pleasure.

The [illegible] enough to be skeptical. By the time we grow old, we have been so many times deceived, things happen that we can believe anything.

[illegible] the most married women ever have that they have no one to thank for it but their husband's insurance money.

There is nothing so terrible as the cruel candor of a motherless girl.

The [illegible] of being a man is that it is not good for without its being said reflection on your character.

It's a proof that I may not die until I have really lived.

I'd rather be a peach for one hour than a turnip for a century.

If we only knew what our friends said of us, the most admired of us would die of chagrin.

A Successful Wife

SYNOPSIS OF PREVIOUS CHAPTERS

ESTHER CAREY, a poor girl, whose father died when she was fifteen, and whose mother died soon after, leaving her with the care of five younger children, determines to face the world bravely, earn her own way and support the little family. They lived in Brackettville, a New Jersey suburb of the great metropolis of New York.

She begins life as a stenographer in Wall street at $15 a week, and later becomes a place as amanuensis for Mrs. William Falsworth in a Fifth avenue mansion. Falsworth, whose wife is a doll-like woman who does not understand him, falls in love with Esther. He gives her all the work of his firm and with this and the work of other big patrons she is enabled to organize her own office in the tenth floor of a Wall street skyscraper.

Where a few years before she was earning $5 a week, she now employs four assistants and clears $2,000 a year.

Senator Bellars, one of her patrons, has her dictate a letter to a nephew of his, Weston Kirkland, in Paris asking him to give up his art studies and come to New York. The Senator believes the nephew is "going to the devil" in Europe.

Kirkland comes to New York and, like Falsworth, falls in love with Esther. She refuses Falsworth's offer to elope and he severs her for the present. While in the [illegible] Kirkland calls daily to have dictation work done, and one rainy afternoon visits Esther at her home in Brackettville. While he is seated on the piazza, Esther is amazed to see Falsworth coming up the road from the station.

Despite her efforts, the two men meet face to face and Falsworth bravely insults Kirkland. When the latter leaves, Falsworth says: "Esther, that man must not come here again."

He tells her Kirkland is not fit for any good woman to associate with. She is deranged at the thought that Stephen "is free to marry Esther, and Esther is free to a doll." He again asks her to flee with him. She refuses and Falsworth leaves again for the West. Kirkland calls one day, soon after, and takes Esther for a long walk in Central Park. She knows after that stroll that he is desperate in his love for her.

Falsworth again urges her to go away with him, and she finally promises to do so in less than a week. But when the time comes she does not do so, and Falsworth comes to her office, pale as death.

CHAPTER X.—(Continued)

AND I answered: "That's just where I would drive you if I were fifteen, and you would, if you don't, Esther."

I must have looked so set and hard at him that he lost hope at the start; but he argued and urged and pleaded and begged, and I clasped my hands in my lap and kept saying over and over to myself "I will not! I will not! I will not!"

Will got wild at last, and jumped up.

"Very well" he cried. "If you're so good as all this, you'll have to take the consequences. I won't drive without you."

I begged him to go home and get rested and to quit down and not be crazy like this. He would look it over. Somebody should come in. I told him.

In Came Kirkland

He looked at me in a way I shall never forget. Then he kissed me, and walked over to the window and sort of huddled down in a chair. He [illegible] of us so miserable, the door opened, and in came Mr. Kirkland, looking startled.

"I thought I heard you yell, Miss Carey," he said, and afterward he thought how strange a thing it was to say. Then he saw Will in the window. "Hello, old man, come from Washington, and no one was in his hand. "Is this man annoying you?" he asked me, in a perfectly awful voice.

"Oh, no—no." I said, but I must have looked queer enough.

"I don't believe you."

I told him it was all right, and to please go and leave us.

"No," he said, in the same impossible voice. "not until you've told me what's up."

Will turned around then; he had been crying, but he was so angry at Mr. Kirkland that it gave him spunk and nerve.

"Miss Carey's bossing me, will you," he gets ready, and he doesn't need drunken reprobate to send him either."

Mr. Kirkland didn't answer him. He shall wait outside. Miss Carey, will you talk with your friend, unless you ask me to stay, which I am quite ready to do."

I was trembling so and so faint that I couldn't find any words to say, and I didn't want Will to see how I felt or how it hurt me to see him go like that—or what it was to me to see him go like that. I just let him go, and I sat down again at my machine, cool like ice. I didn't speak to Will or say good bye, but he stood a moment there by me, staring down, his face marked with anger and tears; then he picked up his cane and gloves, and I heard him go down the hall to the elevator. His step didn't stop, so I knew he hadn't met Mr Kirkland on the way.

CHAPTER XI.

A Vacation

MY nerves gave way after this, and about the 15th of August I took a vacation. I went to a place called Mohawk, in the Catskill Mountains, and took Tommy with me. He had been going to work for a week only, and he was awfully tan[illegible] sain. I had never been alone with any of the boys before, and it seemed queer at first. But it was lovely out there on the lake, so cool, and my windows faced the lake and the hills and the sky, and there wasn't a sound but the birds and the water. Tommy had a perfectly elegant time—rowing and fishing and swimming, and he got well brown, and almost fat for him. He used to row me out in the evening in the moonlight. I liked Tommy best of all in the family because he was brighter and better looking. He found some boys to go around with, too, and I was a great deal alone, but I liked it.

After a few days a book came for me from New York. It was Richard Fervel. I read it sitting there in the piney woods, leaning against a tree. Some books come, for Tommy, too, and we had plenty to keep busy with. Everything about Mohawk Lake for me is connected with Mr. Falsworth and Tommy. I went up with that trouble, and I tried to leave it there. I carried it around with me on the lake and in the woods like a big parcel that one can't possibly carry more farther, and yet which one doesn't want to lose. I don't know where I laid it down, after all.

There was a little excursion that everybody made, back of the hotel, up to the top of Pine Hill, where they said you saw a beautiful view. Every day, nearly, Tommy would take me to go and climb. But every day and each time it was lower down the mountain Tommy's breath gave out, and we never got to the top. He didn't like to give in, though—he was a proud little fellow, and I could see he was ashamed. I felt sorry for him when he said

"The fellows say you can see four States from Pine Hill, Sis—It's a mean shame!"

Just the same, when we came home from Mohawk Lake, Tommy's face was round and fat and he looked well, and started right in to work. I brought back a sinature of Lake Mohawk, and pinned it on my wall. It was a small photo of the hotel, with the lake and the mountains black around it. It looked clean and quiet and awfully remote. It was my idea of a real wilderness.

Kirkland Sent Books

Mr. Kirkland had stayed down in Washington all Summer, but he sent me up magazines and books from there, and wrote me about them, asking me how I liked so-and-so, and "What do you think of such-and-such?" He never sent me anything but [illegible] stories, and by and by they got to be a part of my daily life, and I used to look forward to them through the week and think about Hester Prynne and Dorothea and Rosamond Vincl, and I used to think it made things easier to understand when you watch the way they work out.

Mr. Kirkland was secretary to his uncle then, and seemed to be giving satisfaction. His letters were full of funny things and doings down there in Washington. He never seemed to care a bit that I didn't write. Once I read in the paper that he was up in Newport with the Gandervelts over Sunday, and I knew that his uncle would be pleased.

One Sunday afternoon in late October—a cold, bright afternoon—I was taking a walk with Tommy down by Farmer's Pond. The leaves had turned red, and it looked bright and pretty, like a scarlet dell. Tommy and I walked round the pond a couple of times before supper. I didn't think he was very well. He seemed to get thinner and older-looking every day. One-third around we met Mr. Kirkland slowly strolling toward us. He had on a new fall suit and a soft, brown felt hat and a nice tie. He looked perfectly fine, but it seemed as though he had grown taller and more stooping and thinner than ever. He carried a book in his hand. He was laughing and pleasant as usual, and glad to see us.

He asked Tommy if he were taking the West Point examinations yet, and Tommy said no, that he was working in a New York office.

"You run home, Tom, and let me scold your sister. She doesn't know how the United States Army needs men."

Then he told me that Tommy didn't look well or strong, and I answered that none of us "looked much at any time."

"Lovely, Miss Esther! You look a great deal! What have you been doing to grow so disappointingly handsome?"

I couldn't help but laugh.

"Well, nobody ever called me that, anyway."

Venus to Someone

Then he went on: "If a woman lives long enough she'll find some man to admire each one of her traits and features, until, in the end, she discovers she is a complete Venus. One fellow will hang himself for her lips; another will commit crime for her hand; another will tell her that her eyes can move him, and so on."

He opened the book he held. "Here," he said, "is something written by a giant" and he read out loud to me as we walked along, "The Garden of Proserpine":

"Here, where the world is quiet,
Here, where all trouble seems
Dead winds' and spent waves' riot
In doubtful dreams of dreams;
I watch the green fields growing
For reaping folk and sowing,
For harvest-time and mowing,
A sleepy world of streams."

I said I thought it was very pretty, when he had finished.

"You use the wrong term, Miss Carey. Don't you see any difference between your own exquisite little dress and this verse I have been reading?"

"Of course, a great deal."

"Now, for instance, you wouldn't call this scarlet wall of quivering foliage, this liquid hearted corner of the woods, 'nice,' would you?"

Daysey Mayme and Her Folks

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE

She Goes to a Social Affair and Comes Back Strapped in a Sheet

DAISEY MAYME APPLETON recently went to a social affair, clothed in a hobble skirt and her right mind, and came home strapped in a sheet.

She found, when the amusements for the evening were sorted out, that she was assigned to play a game of old maid with three very prim, very precise and very good ladies, while at a table in another room a fun-loving party of girls were gathered around a table playing poker.

"You are from prohibition Kansas," said the hostess, "and I know you do not play anything as wicked as poker."

Daysey Mayme gulped down her disappointment, and tried to get interested in old maid, with the tantalizing sound of chips in her ears.

One of the men at the poker table was telling a story. "I know a better one than that," said Daysey Mayme to herself.

Early in the evening the guests at the poker table were served a drink of an amber color, which made them laugh and talk more, and, at Daysey Mayme's table, the hostess placed four glasses of ice water.

"I didn't forget," she whispered, "that you are from a Prohibition State. It must make you proud that your native State has such a glorious record."

Daysey Mayme didn't hear her, for some one at the poker table was telling a very favorite poker story, and telling it WRONG.

She was brought back to her surroundings by the very prim, very precise and very good lady on her left saying:

"Ah, but that must have been a long time ago."

"What's that?" said Daysey Mayme.

"That Kansas law abolishing roller towels! How many thousands of innocent victims that germ-laden roller towel has numbered, no one will ever know."

Daysey Mayme tried to look proud, but they were mixing a new kind of drink at the poker table, and she wanted to hear the proportions.

"My dear," said her partner at old maid, "I am proud to meet some one from a State where the women are compelled to keep screens over their prunes."

Daysey Mayme looked at her wistfully, took a drink of ice water, and choked—it [illegible]

"And that anaconda hotel bed sheet [illegible] What a lot you have to be proud of," said her partner, dealing the cards.

"Ah," said all three with a sigh. "The noble characters that are made in a State that is dry."

Daysey Mayme looked at the ice water, the deck of old maid cards and at the three very prim, very precise and very good ladies at her table, and then at the poker table, where they were telling jokes not fit for good as some she knew.

Then she thought of many happy little wet spots in the State that was dry, and—with the confession that this was a sad [illegible] of her social future in Boston, became a [illegible] had the reputation of her home State to live up to—she gave a gasp and slid to the floor in a fit.

WORKED BOTH WAYS

"Yes," said the man in the tram, "my wife used to get awfully nervous every morning for a couple of months or so at first, but I assured her that it couldn't be burglars because they are careful not to make any noise."

"And that calmed her, did it?" remarked the man in the next seat.

"I should say not," replied the first rider. "Now she gets nervous every time she doesn't hear any noise."

Health and Beauty Queries

BY MRS. MAE MARTYN.

Mrs. Corn F: Even though your husband objects so strongly to your using face powder, it is your duty to look as youthful and charming as possible; try this lotion, and although it will beautify your face much better than powder, no one will detect any evidence of a lotion. Just look over four ounces of spurmax at any drug store; dissolve it in one-half pint of hot water, then add two teaspoonfuls glycerine. Apply this lotion to your face twice each night, rubbing gently until dry, and it will lend a most wholesome, natural, charming tone to your skin. Then, whiten and soften your complexion and take away that shiny, sallow look. It is excellent for removing freckles and sun pimples; it also affords the skin splendid protection against the sun and wind, and will not rub off easily like powder does when you wear it well.

Daisy L: Beauty, thin, short hair can be fluffed up and made to appear abundant without the aid of false hair. Try shampooing your hair with a teaspoonful of borax dissolved in a cup of hot water, rinsing afterwards with clear water. This shampoo produces a rich, creamy lather that cleanses the hair and scalp as no other shampoo will; it makes the hair beautifully lustrous, soft and fluffy. It dries very quickly, and after using it you will find your hair easy to do up and will stay in place without the aid of combs or pins. It also adds much longer than ever before. You will no longer be troubled with dandruff and itching scalp. If you can't get a contrivex shampoo at any druggist's, dissolve a cup full of powdered borax in a cup of hot water and use as directed above. Never shampoo with soap. The alkali in it streaks, bleaches and eats the very life out of the hair, making it dull and lifeless.

Mrs. M. M.: To purify the blood, tone up the system, sharpen the appetite and get new life and strength, there is nothing like taking a good tonic. If you will go to any druggist and get one-half pint alcohol and one ounce hardene and mix them in a bottle, then add one-half pint water and boiling water to make a full quart, you will have one of the best tonics known to medical science. It is inexpensive, and by taking a tablespoon before each meal you will soon get rid of your pimples and your sallow skin will disappear. Also take on the tint of perfect health. This excellent tonic has a most beneficial effect upon the complexion and, will brace you up, making that "played out" feeling.

Nancy: Don't worry even if your eyes do seem to be weaker and losing their color. You can easily make them strong and just as clear, bright, sparkling and full of color as ever by putting in each eye twice daily a few drops of a simple tonic made by dissolving an ounce of [illegible] in a pint of cold water. This tonic is very strengthening and soothing to tired, weak, inflamed eyes, and you will find by using it regularly you will never have cause to complain of not having beautiful, strong eyes.

Irene: Unless you want your face covered with unsightly hairs, you had better keep away from electrolysis, for in most cases, if you want a good, dependable, greaseless complexion beautifier, make it yourself as follows: Stir together two teaspoonfuls glycerine, one ounce almond meal, one pint of soft water, and repeat a few hours before using. You will find this a fine for unveiling. It will remove thoroughly all pore dirt. There is nothing like it for removing and preventing blackheads, wrinkles, skin roughness and enlarged pores. This cream-jelly will make your skin clear, smooth, fresh looking and plump. As a complexion beautifier, you will not rub off easily like powder does when you wear it well.

"Worried" (and others): Yes, I am glad to repeat the flesh-reducing formula which has given such splendid results in relieving so many of their burdensome fat. Get four ounces of parnotta at any drug store; dissolve it in one and one-half pints ice water, and when cool strain out the sediment and take a tablespoonful of the liquid before each meal. This remedy is harmless and one does not positively notice the inconvenience of dieting and exercising. As a complexion beautifier, you will want nothing better.

Ada Alice Evans: I am glad to repeat the formula of that wonderful tonic for your hair and scalp troubles. Mix together one-half pint alcohol, one-half pint cold water and one ounce quinozone. This tonic is good for its remarkable hair-growing properties as well as for stopping falling hair and destroying dandruff. I have known many people that were practically bald, to by using this tonic regularly twice a week on their scalps soon had an abundant and fine hair as they ever desire. It checks scalp irritation instantly and makes the hair soft, fluffy and free from stickiness. Many high-class hairdressers and barbers use this tonic extensively and with excellent results.

Miss Prim: It is an easy matter to restore the youthful blonde tint and lustre to your hair if your first shampoo thoroughly with a tonic made by dissolving in warm tea, rinse and dry again. To prepare the tea, get a package of camelline from the druggist and steep in a pint of water and strain before using.

Maude: The troublesome hairs of which you speak can be quickly removed by applying plain delatone. Get ounces of delatone from your druggist and with a little cold water to form a paste. Spread on hairy surface and in two or three minutes rub off and wash the skin. You will have to pay a dollar an ounce for delatone, until it [illegible] it only requires the second application.

Copyright, 1911, by National News Association.

This is a peculiarly diabolical invention of Desperate Desmond's. He bound our fair heroine to the top of a palm tree and is bending the tree back by means of a rope which he has tied to it. When he lets go, the natural elasticity of the trunk will assert itself and Rosamond will be slammed up against the face of the cliff.

In the meantime our old friend, Undaunted Jones, the famous scout, sees Claude struggling in the water and throws him a life preserver. There ought to be seven or eight carnegie medals coming to that kid Jones if he only gets his, but, of course, he is not worrying about that. All he wants is to be of some service to his fellow-men.

Now, if Desmond had let go of the rope right away, Claude would have had too late to save Rosamond, but the villain wanted in hopes that he might persuade her to marry him. This gave our hero time to reach the top of the cliff and see the deadly peril that threatens his sweetheart. And he has the life preserver with him.

As the villain lets go the rope, Claude drops the life preserver over Rosamond's shoulders, thus breaking the force of the blow, and the cowardly cur is foiled yet once more. It's all Desmond's own fault, though. He shouldn't have wasted his time proposing to a girl who had so often expressed her determination not to marry him.

The only thing for the villain to do now is to beat it, but Claude won't let him do that. Our hero has the drop on Desmond, and is going to take him along with him to some place where there are all modern conveniences for executing criminals.

And Claude's friend, the aviator, is going to help him give the villain his dues.

Claude has got the cure tied to the aeroplane again and is taking him up above the clouds. When they get up high enough there will be something doing in the line of just retribution. We could tell you right now what it's going to be, but we're saving it for to-morrow's pictures. Make sure that your newsdealer saves you a copy.

Hereafter Desperate Desmond's thrilling adventures will be a regular feature of Sunday AMERICAN. Don't miss the wonderful deeds of Claude Eclaire and his Rosamond and their persistent foe, Desperate Desmond, in the Sunday AMERICAN.

The Grocery Boy Pleads with the Pretty Cook

By KENNETT HARRIS

"SOME of these here fine days you'll be sorry for the way you've been treating me," observed the grocery boy, as he closed his order book and thrust it into his hip pocket.

"I wouldn't wonder," agreed the pretty cook, indifferently. "Don't forget the cabbage."

"Of all the sad words of tongue or pen, the saddest is what a blame chump I've been," proceeded the grocery boy.

"Well, I s'pose you can't help it," remarked the pretty cook. "And if you don't pick me a good one, you'll take it right straight back. You hear me?

"I hear you all right, all right," said the grocery boy. "There ain't nothing wrong with my ears, unless it's the way they sicken out since I got my hair cut. But I wish you could see my new Spring suit."

"Let me see the back of the one you've got on now," pleaded the pretty cook, "and remember I'm far sighted. I guess the gate will be about the right distance. Step lively, please."

"Evelina, what have I done to deserve them cruel words?" asked the grocery boy. "At least, let me tell you that it's a brown mixture and there's six buttons on the cuffs and a pocket on the pocket flap. If you once see me in that there suit, you'd begin to get some idea of what you're missing. Custom-made, silkiline serge linings, hand-sewed and the last bubbling cry at that, and me inside."

"That's the trouble with 'em, I guess," said the pretty cook. "You might pack 'em in a box and send 'em around by express, though."

"I'm 'Hey Bill,' I Am."

"You see one in a flannel shirt and old pants, after I've been wrastling kerosene barrels, and flour sacks, and bundel backstas of taters, and you don't see me no other way," said the grocery boy, pathetically. "I'm 'Hey, Bill,' I am. You'd just as soon whistle if you wanted me."

"Just as soon," admitted the pretty cook. "I'll agree to whistle any time I want you. I ain't learned yet, but I will by then."

"Some way with my line of conversation," continued the grocery boy. "I don't get no show on the subject of fresh cream, ery butter and dill pickles. I can't do myself justice when I'm limited to prunes and Columbia River salmon."

"Cabbage is what we was talking about," the pretty cook reminded him.

"You'll get your cabbage, all right, all right," said the grocery boy, "and you'll be surprised if you heard me spread myself on dandelfils and blocks. I've got a illock tie to go with that suit."

"Mom always you've got one to stay with it," observed the pretty cook. "I don't see how it could get into the habit of going if you were in."

"And illock socks, if you'll excuse me mentioning 'em," the grocery boy informed her, "and a charleyboy hat with a illock band around it, and to-morrow afternoon you'll see me with a illock in my buttonhole."

"I doubt it," said the pretty cook.

"That's just where you make the mistake," argued the grocery boy. "You tell the milkman that you've got one of them nervous headaches and you'll have to ask him to excuse you. Then you and me will go and give the good people on the drive the treat of their lives. You don't need to bring no lunch. You leave that to me.

"You may think because I put you right on the price of them eggs yesterday that I slit no sport. That's where you've got me sized up wrong again. When I take a lady out she can go as far as she likes, and you'll never hear no roar out of me. I'm dead game, from start to finish."

"I'm getting one of them nervous headaches right now," said the pretty cook.

A Bulge in His Pocket

"I ain't saying that that there suit is going to set just right at the gotaway," insinuated the grocery boy. "There's going to be a bulge in the side pocket that's owing to a pound box of the best candy, and a sag in my kick where I've got my week's wages."

"Do you know how long it takes cabbage to cook good and done?" inquired the pretty cook.

"Just as you say," said the grocery boy. "Only when you're sitting with your bowed head on your arms, blistering the table oilcloth with your hot scalding tears, you don't need to say that I didn't give you a chance."

"There's some hot, scalding water in that there kettle on the stove," said the pretty cook.

The De Bercy Affair

SYNOPSIS OF PREVIOUS CHAPTERS.

MADEMOISELLE DE BERCY, favorite of the stage, who came to London recently from her triumphs in Paris, has won her way into the best circles in the fashionable West End, is found shockingly murdered in her luxurious apartments at the Feldsham Mansions.

Rupert Osborne, a rich young American, who was to have married her, is believed by the public to be her murderer. Chief Inspector Winter, of Scotland Yard, however, believes him innocent. Detective Clarke finds a taxicab driver who admits driving a man closely resembling Osborne to the woman's apartments ten minutes before the murder. Osborne, however, establishes an alibi.

It is found that Miss De Bercy was in reality Mirabel Armand, the daughter of a Jersey peasant. She was killed by a thrust through the right eye with a dagger-like weapon, and a prehistoric axe-head stolen from a museum was used to mutilate her face.

Furneaux, the shrewdest detective in Scotland Yard, is strangely agitated when detailed to take charge of the case. He admits he knew Miss De Bercy in Jersey years ago. Inspector Winter is puzzled by Furneaux's manner and sets detectives to watch him.

Osborne is warned by the police not to attend the funeral and hides himself at Winter's suggestion, in Tormouth, a seaside village. There, through a strange accident, he meets a young woman who is destined to play a remarkable part in the story.

Clarke has arrested two anarchists, Janee and Descartes. It is said Miss De Bercy was a member of an anarchist society.

The young woman Osborne meets at Tormouth is painting by the sea. Osborne falls from a bluff nearby and lands at her feet. He and she are both greatly surprised and an acquaintanceship springs up which results in their agreement to sing each other again.

Furneaux goes to Osborne's apartments, where he finds Hyda Prout, Osborne's secretary. He tries to get her to tell him where Osborne is and inspects the museum, where there are many curiosities, including a number of "celts," or stone axe-heads, and one is missing.

Directed by Miss Prout's finger, he also discovers a vacant place in a rack of knives and daggers. The girl positively cries that Osborne is innocent, and Furneaux becomes convinced that she loves her employer.

From Miss Prout Furneaux learns that Osborne's housekeeper believes she saw him at home during a part of the time supposed to be covered by his alibi.

TO-DAY'S INSTALMENT

By GORDON HOLMES.

Copyright, 1911, by Edward J. Clode.

CHAPTER V.—(Continued)

"PRECISELY," said Furneaux, with a voice that at last had a quiver to it. "If my fact is clear in a mass of doubt, that, at least, is established beyond cavil. And Mrs. Bates's other name—I forget it?"

"Hester."

"That's it. Is she here now?"

"She is taking a holiday to-day. She was dreadfully upset."

"Thanks. Good-by."

He held out his hand a second time, quite affably. Hyda Prout followed him out to the library and, when the street door had closed behind him, peeped through the curtains at his alert, natty figure as he hastened away.

Furneaux took a motor-bus to Whitehall, and, what was very odd, the bus carried him beyond his destination, over Westminster Bridge. Indeed, he was so lost in meditation.

His object now was to see Winter and Ring at his chief's head scene of the amazing things he had just learned.

But when he arrived at Scotland Yard Winter was not there. At that moment, in fact, Winter was in the private house in Mayfair, whither he had rushed to meet Furneaux in order to whisper to Furneaux without a moment's delay some news just gleaned by the merest chance—the news that Pauline Dessuix, Rose de Bercy's maid, had quarreled with her mistress on the morning of the murder, and had been given notice to quit Miss de Bercy's service.

When Winter arrived at Osborne's house Furneaux, of course, was gone. To his question at the door, "Is Mr. Furneaux here?" the parlor-maid answered: "I am not sure, sir—I'll see."

Perhaps you don't know Mr. Furneaux," said Winter, "a small-built gentleman."

"Oh, yes, sir. I know him," the girl answered. "I let him in this morning, as well as when he called some days ago."

No words in the English language would have more astonished Winter, for Furneaux had not mentioned to him that he had ever been to Osborne's. What Furneaux could have been doing there "some days ago" was beyond his guessing. Before his wonderment could get out another question, the girl was leading the way across the library.

In the library were Miss Prout, and Jenkins handing her a letter.

"I came to see if Inspector Furneaux was here," Winter said; "but evidently he has gone."

"Only about three minutes," said Hyda Prout, turning a quick look round at him.

"Thanks—I am sorry to have troubled you," he said. Then he added to Jenkins, "Much obliged for the cigars!"

"Do not mention it, sir," said Jenkins.

Winter had reached the library door, when he stopped short.

"By the way, Jenkins, is this Mr. Furneaux's first visit here?—or don't you remember?"

"Mr. Furneaux came here once before, sir," said Jenkins in his staid official way.

"Ah, I though perhaps—when was that?"

"Let me see, sir. It was—yes—of the third, the afternoon of the murder, I remember."

Words Ate Into Brain

The third—the afternoon of the murder. Those words ate their way into Winter's very brain. They might have been shot from a pistol rather than uttered by the placid Jenkins.

"The afternoon, you say," repeated Winter. "You—quite so; he wished to see Mr. Osborne. At what exact hour about would that be?"

Jenkins again meditated. Then he said: "Mr. Furneaux called, sir, about 5.30, as far as I can recollect. He wished to see my master, who was out, but was expected to return. So Mr. Furneaux was shown in here to await him, and he waited a quarter of an hour, if I am right in saying that he came at 5.45, because Mr. Osborne telephoned me from Feldsham Mansions that he would not be returning, and as I entered the museum there, where Mr. Furneaux then was, to tell him, I heard the clock strike six, I remember."

At this Hyda Prout whirled round in her chair.

"The Museum," she cried. "How odd, how exceedingly odd! Just now Mr. Furneaux seemed to be rather surprised when I told him that there was a museum!"

"He doubtless forgot, miss," said Jenkins, "for he had certainly gone in there when I entered the library."

"Thanks, thanks," said Winter lightly, "that's how it was—good-day"; and he went out with the vacant air of a man who had lost something, but knows not what.

He drove straight to Scotland Yard. There in the office sat Furneaux.

For a long time they conferred—Winter with hardly a word, one hand on his chin, the other his mustache, looking at Furneaux with a frank, with curious eyes, meditating, silent. And Furneaux told how the celt and the stiletto were missing from Osborne's museum.

"And the inference?" said Winter, speaking at last, his round eyes staring widely at Furneaux.

"An innocent man, Furneaux?" said Winter almost with a groan of reproach—"an innocent man?"

Furneaux's eyes flashed angrily an instant, and some word leapt to his lips, but it was not uttered. He stood up.

"Well, that's soon it stands for the moment. Time will show—I must be going," he said.

And when he had gone out, Winter rose wearily, and paced with slow steps a long time through the room, his head bent quite down, staring. Presently he came upon a broken cigar, such as Furneaux delighted in smelling. Then a fierce cry broke from him.

"Furneaux, my friend! Why, this is madness! Oh, it is everything."

CHAPTER VI.
To Tormouth.

"A possible?"

"A packet of Cuprol?"

"I'm back pour vous, m'sieur?"

"Tu sais?"

A frowsy waiter was hurrying through some such jangle of loud voices from the "comrades" scattered among the tables of a back room in a very back street of Soho. The hour was two in the morning, and the light in that Anarchist Club was murky and blurred. Only one gas-jet on the wall lit the room, and that struggled but feebly through the cigarette smoke that choked the air like a fog-air that was foul and close as well as dim, for some thirty persons, mostly men but some few women, were crowded in there as if there was no place else on earth for them.

One heard the rattle of dice, the whirr of cards being shuffled against imitation gentle. Two poor girls, cramped in a corner, were attempting to dance to the rhythm of an Italian song. They were laughing with wide mouths, their heads thrown back, nearly onto death, yet alive with mute misery withal.

To Be Continued To-morrow.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

IT IS NOT FAIR.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am eighteen years old and in love with a man twelve years my senior. Of late we have quarrelled, because he objects to my going around with others.

As he lives quite a distance from me and I hardly ever see him the only method I have to see him lately I have grown really fond of another young man one year my senior, with whom I am working every day and he claims to love me.

As this other young man doesn't ever come to see me I am at a loss to know what to do. WORRIED.

It is not fair for any man to restrict you in your association with others unless he assumes the responsibility of being your future husband.

If you are not certain of your feelings it would be well for you to wait until you are older before making a final decision.

HAVE AN UNDERSTANDING.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am seventeen years old and I have been keeping company with a young man for the last year. He is five years my senior, gentlemanly in every respect, holds a good position, and could give me a happy home, which I think every girl longs for. When before you beg so many married people say, "Don't get married," because married life is a failure, it really makes me feel as though I had better not take any chances, although he has asked me to wed.

I really love this young man, and I am sure he cares a good deal for me, although he is not one who is always telling loving words.

Again, he is of a different religion.

Do you think this would be a bar to our happiness? I am afraid his relatives might object on this account. I am a girl of refinement and on an equal footing with them in every way.

I will gladly be your adviser. FALTERING G.

MARRIED life is never a failure if it is founded on friendship and mutual respect.

Your future happiness will not be marred, if, before giving your final consent, you come to a definite understanding as to your different religious views.

You will take this into consideration for the rest of your life and you must give yourself plenty of time to consider him under all aspects and determine whether your natures are absolutely harmonious.

The Tailor's Botch

GOVERNOR W. R. STUBBS of Kansas, the genius of a bull he was promoting, said at a recent banquet:

"The opponents of this bill find fault with it well, in that, they remind me of Jack Hughes.

"The tailor brought Jack home a new suit the other day and Jack immediately started to try it on. Then, ten minutes later, he shouted down to his wife:

"That fool tailor made a botch out of the vest.

"How, John?' Mrs. Hughes asked.

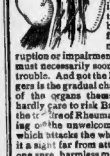
DANGERS OF FAT

HOW FAT AFFECTS THE KIDNEYS



KIDNEYS The Kidneys often become affected by fatty deposits before any other organ. Probably there is no more important function of the animal body than that performed by the kidneys. Any interruption or impairment of this function, must necessarily soon result in serious trouble. And not the least of these dangers is the gradual change in substance of the organs themselves. You will hardly care to risk Bright's Disease, or the dread Rheumatism, to say nothing of the unwelcome burden of fat which attacks the whole body, making it a sight far from attractive. There is one sure, harmless means by which fat may be checked; that is the famous Marmola Prescription of a Detroit Physician, rendered more convenient and effective in Marmola Prescription Tablets. All druggists sell Marmola Prescription Tablets, and their price is 50c for a large case, or they will be sent postpaid on receipt of price by the Marmola Co., 76 Monroe Ave., Detroit, Mich. By their use, exercise and dieting may be discarded; a smooth, clear complexion and even satisfactory reduction accomplished at the rate of 10 to 16 ounces a day.

A Custard Pie

Is one to be enjoyed by the whole family—good for children as well as for grown-ups. To make it creamy, rich and of fine flavor use Borden's Evaporated Milk as follows:

RECIPE

Dilute one can of Peerless Brand Evaporated Milk with three times as much water, add to this four eggs well beaten, a pinch of salt, a little grated nutmeg or ground cinnamon and sufficient sugar to sweeten to taste. Line two small or one large pie plate with plain paste (deep pie plates are preferable), fill with the mixture and bake in a quick oven for one-half hour.

New York Public Library

"Collect the Dust —Don't Spread It"

In the New York Public Library, to be opened this week, the problem of dust removal is acute. Not because there will be more dust than in any building of similar size; but because there are more places for the dust to hide.

The problem is not alone to take care of the dirt that is tracked in daily by thousands of pairs of feet—not alone to clean the floors, furniture and walls.

But to clean the tops of 3,500,000 books, and the nooks and crannies between and behind them.

To keep clean the sixty-three miles of book shelves on which these books are stacked.

This cleaning problem was solved by the installation of a "Richmond" Vacuum Cleaning System.

There is no nook or cranny in the 926,000 cubic feet of this library that cannot be cleaned by this "Richmond" system.

Not every day, of course, and without interruption or annoyance to a single reader.

And the saving in labor alone will pay the whole cost of the system, over and over again.

The Biggest Buildings in the World are "Richmond" Vacuum Cleaned

Such buildings as the 41-story Singer tower, the U. S. Custom House in New York, the Cook County Court House in Chicago, the Pennsylvania State Capitol, the U. S. Mints at Philadelphia and San Francisco and the White House itself.

Such hotels as the Knickerbocker, Plaza, Ritz-Carlton, St. Regis of New York; La Salle, Auditorium Annex, Chicago; Bellevue-Stratford, Philadelphia, and 209 others of the best known hotels in America.

Such stores as Marshall Field & Co., Carson, Pirie, Scott & Co., Chicago; Altman's, Arnold-Constable's, Macy's, of New York; Wanamaker's of both New York and Philadelphia; Jordan, Marsh & Co. of Boston; William Taylor & Sons, Cleveland, and well known stores in every prominent city.

Wherever installed—in a ten room residence or a building which measures its floor space by the acre—"Richmond" Vacuum Cleaning will pay for itself in from eighteen to thirty months.

The economy is three-fold:

First, it halves the labor, and consequently the cost of cleaning.

Second, it puts an end to the annual tear-up called housecleaning—and to all of the expense, wear and tear, breakage and depreciation which housecleaning involves.

Third, it eliminates the chief cause of all wear and depreciation—dust, grit, grime; and doubles or trebles the life of all carpets, rugs, wall coverings, hangings, upholstery. Keeping everything always bright and new.

"Richmond" Vacuum Cleaning can readily be installed in old buildings as well as new—in residences, apartments, hotels, schools, office buildings, libraries, churches, theatres, factories, stores, garages and public buildings.

The actual saving soon provides full reimbursement of the initial cost.

BOSTON DAY AT WORLD SHOW

Although Mayor Fitzgerald is at Philadelphia attending a city planning convention, the "World in Boston" program for Boston Day was carried out today. The list of speakers includes the Rev. Dr. W. S. Bascall of Boston, Dr. John Jackson, the leper expert; the Rev. Dr. M. A. Levy, the Rev. Dr. W. D. Knoeland, the Rev. Dr. A. K. Kavanagh, the Rev. Dr. S. Vaughan, the Rev. Dr. James Todd, the Rev. Dr. James Alexander and others.

Yesterday's chief feature was an address by Dr. W. T. Grenfell, the Labrador missionary.

"Cutting out a man's appendix and saving his life is as much a Christian way as preaching the gospel," he said. "I hate the cliche that Christ came into the world simply to furnish people with an insurance ticket to heaven after death.

"The woman who has been at the mission six years has shown the gospel of love by reading dirty clothing and nursing their mothers. The dentist who gave his time last Summer and is going again this year applies his tools of torture with the teaching of spiritual truth, and both are equally good. The young man from Harvard who made himself the friend of all and taught the value of Indian meal was doing a religious work, and the doctor who gave time and example in the use of soap and water and the cleaning up of refuse helps enforce the truth that both body and soul should be clean.

TO-DAY'S STOCK MARKETS COPPERS ARE STOCK FEATURE

NEW YORK, May 18.—Strength in coppers and a general advance in the first prices featured the opening of the stock market to-day. The opening tone was strong, and there was considerable activity in trading. In consequence of rumors of a pending big merger of copper interests Amalgamated Copper and American Smelting were both strong.

There were numerous other rumors of pending consolidation in other lines, but there appeared little decided inclination to trade on the strength of these stories. There was no reaction from the Standard Oil decision apparent. The following gains were recorded in the initial prices: B. R. T. ¼, Reading ½, Southern Pacific ¾, Atchison ¼, Pacific Mail ¾, Steel ¾, American Smelting ¾, and Peoples Gas ¼. The shorts appeared to be in rapid retreat to cover, and traders declared that stocks were absorbed as soon as they were thrown upon the market.

During the first half hour there was no great volume of realizing, which gave the market a reactionary look which, in fact, did not exist. Speculation appeared to be shifting into St. Paul and the Hill stocks, these issues having the benefit of arguments based upon a highly favorable outlook for Spring wheat and also indicated substantial firmness.

The cash market opened strong with Standard Oil and American Tobacco firm. The Americans were strong in the London market. A bull movement in coppers was also noted in London, as well as firmness to Mexicans imparted by the outlook for peace.

STATE ST. NEWS FOR INVESTORS

Hundreds of millions of idle money has been released by the Supreme Court and it would be "unreasonable" to expect the investment market of the past two days to continue indefinitely. The great leaders of finance believe a "reasonable" bull market will continue for an extended period.

$ $ $

Even after the sharp advance that has taken place as a result of the Standard Oil decision, there is a very large buying power unsatisfied. Many institutions have placed their buying orders at too low a figure, and although they have raised them from time to time in the last two days, they have not secured all the stock wanted.

$ $ $

The general upward movement has been helped by assurances received from the Democratic leaders in congress that they would prevent the passage at this session of Congress of any new laws against the corporations. Chief Justice White is a Democrat and his party seems at the moment willing to be leadership.

$ $ $

State Street's view that business was being held up for the oil decision apparently finds confirmation in the action of the Government in making announcement of Mr. Panama and soon indicating after the decision. It may be merely a coincidence, but it is a fact that this announcement by the government had been expected for some months and now comes at the psychological moment.

HISGEN KEEPS UP OIL FIGHT

Thomas L. Hisgen of Springfield, implacable foe of the Oil Trust, in a statement to the AMERICAN to-day, calls upon the government to follow up the Supreme Court decision with speedy criminal prosecutions. Mr. Hisgen declares that inasmuch as this sort is taken the Standard Oil Company, although separated into several divisions, will continue its relentless methods of business. Mr. Hisgen's testimony before the court in the dissolution suit was instrumental in convicting Standard Oil. His long and successful fight for existence in a field which the Oil Trust covets is a matter of business history. Mr. Hisgen's statement follows:

By THOMAS L. HISGEN.

The favorable result of the Standard Oil litigation gives new hope to the independent oil dealers of America.

For more than a quarter of a century we have regarded the Standard Oil Company as exempt from prosecution and protected from punishment by far reaching influences. It has been demonstrated that men high in the Standard Oil combine have not hesitated to make questionable deals with the makers of laws which they have all these years been defying.

The humble independent beheld with glee the fabulous profits annually realized of a twenty-nine million dollar fine and with sadness saw it followed by a decision of a higher court that the twenty-nine million dollar fine was illegal.

When the order of dissolution was passed in the Circuit Court of the United States it was freely predicted that by some means the Standard Oil Company would secure immunity from prosecution. The effect of the decision therefore comes as a welcome surprise to us.

Price of Oil Forced Down.

But the decision comes at a time when the Standard Oil Company has reduced the price of oil to the lowest point in the history of the United States to crush the independents and at a time when the grasp of the great monopoly upon the oil industry has become a terrible load.

The continued distribution of oil of lawful test at 4 cents a gallon means bankruptcy for any oil company not doing the entire business east of the Mississippi. While we are thankful for the decision and are hopeful that its result will make the Standard Oil Company relentless in its practices, it is apparent that only vigorous criminal prosecution of the heads of the trusts will ever bring about the condition which ought to exist in the oil industry.

During the trial of the Standard Oil case, in which I was a witness at the hearings in Albany, I produced evidence that a private detective agency was following our every movement and rebates were given our customers; that the Standard Oil Company secretly divulged that the Oil Trust would go to any length to get information concerning our business, and it was these acts together with evidence from other oil dealers throughout the country which leads to the conviction that ends in the dissolution of this company.

War Not Over Yet.

Personality have been complimented by the officials of the government upon the manner in which the evidence of our company was prepared and presented to them, and it is with pleasure that I am able to congratulate these same officials upon the successful termination of this remarkable litigation.

No decree of dissolution punishes the Standard Oil Company for the illegal practices resulted in big interests buying the stock of the Standard Oil and holding it for its book value.

Undoubtedly the Standard Oil Company will reincorporate, perhaps dividing into several corporations along the lines of producing and distribution. They may seem engage in the same relentless war and protected from punishment by far reaching influences which continue to menace the perpetuity of absolute liberty in the oil industry.

The Standard Oil decisions will not affect these fortunes. The Standard Oil decisions will leave these men in control of the same financial instruments to continue under different corporations the same methods of business.

The independent oil dealers have but one hope which is that the continued discrimination will lead to the arrest of those at the head of all law-defying trusts and that these malefactors may be placed in jail.

I can see no moral difference between the corner groceryman who, to get rid of a competitor, sets his building on fire or bomb and the head of a giant trust who, by the use of his colossal fortune, by illegal acts, forces its competitors into bankruptcy.

MANY TONGUES ON THE ZEELAND

Of the nineteen nationalities represented in the steerage of the White Star liner Zeeland speaking in as many tongues, which docked at Charlestown to-day from Liverpool and Queenstown, the immigration officials found interpreters for all except Mary McDonald and Joseph Flaherty, who hail from Lettemore County, Galway, Ireland. Neither of them knows a single word of English, and there is no Gaelic interpreter in the local immigration service. Although there were almost 200 immigrants from Ireland on the ship, all but rest of them could speak English. A person from Ireland who does not know English, is rarity, according to the immigration authorities.

The Zeeland had forty saloon passengers, 337 second cabin and 650 steerage. Among the first class were John Lawrence and his daughters, Mary and Geraldine. Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Dexter, E. Randolph Bartlett and Margaret Bartlett, Mr. and Mrs. Richard C. Harrison and their young son. The Zeeland had an uneventful voyage.

DIXON NOW WANTS A REAL AIRSHIP

Cromwell Dixon, the boy aeronaut, who last September flew from Governor's Island to Fort Wadsworth, is in this city searching for a monoplane. He was at the Squantum field to-day to watch Starting Burgess fly. Dixon has abandoned the dirigible and adopted the heavier-than-air machine. He expects to buy a competitor at the aero meet to be held here next August.

BOSTON AMERICAN

80 AND 82 SUMMER ST., BOSTON, MAY 18, 1911

Boston's Great Need Is Rapid Transit---It Is Time the Legislature Did Something.

The legislative Committee on Street Railways for a long time has had under consideration some serious questions affecting RAPID TRANSIT in Boston.

The people of Dorchester are demanding a new SUBWAY TO DORCHESTER. The merchants of Boylston street are demanding a new SUBWAY ON BOYLSTON STREET. The people of East Boston are demanding an EXTENSION of the East Boston tunnel and the abolition of the UNJUST TOLLS in that tunnel.

Boston will not have a tolerable system of rapid transit until these demands are granted. They are large undertakings and should not be assumed hastily, but the legislative committee ought not to refuse to act on them until any action at all is impossible.

The legislative session is drawing to a close. Unless the Street Railway Committee reports soon, the Legislature may send over to the consideration of the next General Court or to some commission all these matters which ought not to be postponed.

The public has become SURFEITED with references of these important matters to commissions, joint boards and special committees which settle nothing and carry little weight.

The people of Boston want to go from their homes to their work and from their work to their homes in decent and civilized comfort. They do not want to be packed into cars under hygienic conditions under which the law would forbid the Beef Trust to pack its hogs in the cattle trains.

The people of Boston want their homes to be BROUGHT NEARER, in point of time, to their work. They want to be able to go farther and farther out into the country, where the air is fresh and pure, where their children can play on the green grass, but where the bread earner need not consume too much time in going and coming to and from his work.

It is as we solve our transportation problems that we shall be able to achieve the highest EFFICIENCY of industry and yet preserve the energy of the race. We shall do this by permitting the labor to be done in the dense areas where it is most efficient and the laborer to recuperate his strength where nature's remedial forces are most efficient.

When we can all work in the city and live in the open areas of the country, we have solved a great problem in the conservation of energy and morals, a problem which is almost wholly a TRANSPORTATION PROBLEM.

The Man Who Will Represent the United States at the Coronation

John Hays Hammond—An Excellent Choice as Diplomat, and in All Ways a First-Class Citizen.

[COPYRIGHT NOTICE] Copyright, 1911, by American-Journal-Examiner

A reader wants to know "something about John Hays Hammond, selected to represent this country at the crowning of King George of England, and why Hammond was selected as representative."

Here is the information:

Hammond is the best possible kind of a representative—since it was decided to send a real American citizen, rather than a dodo and tuft hunter.

John Hays Hammond is what you may call a PRODUCING American. He has taken a good many fortunes out of the ground for himself and for others. He has robbed nobody in the course of his fortune making. On the contrary, at every step he has added to the world's supply of gold and other precious metals—increasing by many tens of millions the existing wealth of the world.

Hammond is said to be the best mining expert living, and that is probably true. If there is as good a one, he has not been identified.

He began life with a fine education, plenty of courage and no other assets to speak of.

He fortunately fell into the company of energetic men, and was keyed up to do his best at the start.

His original employer, a truly great man of enterprise, courage and genius, made him understand that it is necessary to show results.

"Well, how are you getting on, Hammond?" the employer asked.

"I don't think I have made any mistakes so far," modestly replied Hammond.

"——!" exclaimed the older man. "That is nothing. Anybody can keep from making mistakes. Better make a hundred mistakes and DO something. What have you DONE?"

It is clear that Hammond has taken that statement to heart, for ever since that time he has "DONE" something all of the time.

He has worked in every part of the world—and always he has been able to say to other men: "Dig there and you will find gold. Dig here and you will find silver or copper. Keep digging where you are and you will find nothing."

He has shown thousands of workers WHERE to dig and many great capitalists where to sink mines without sinking their money.

He has found and developed oil wells, he owns and has developed great water power sites, and among other things he was the moving spirit of that famous raid in the Transvaal. That was the raid which in the end wound up the malformed Boer Republic, in which a Jew or a Catholic could not hold office—ending one more stupid effort to make religious bigotry control the political affairs of men on earth.

Hammond is the type of man that builds up new countries—and that eventually will work for the people as a whole, solving problems in the public administration.

President Taft, who has known Hammond many years, has shown a special aptness in picking out for the people's work men that have proved their ability to find and do work for themselves without waiting for the government to give them a job.

Some other Presidents, Governors, Mayors, etc., have entrusted the public work to men that could not by any possibility prosper off the public payroll.

The crowning of King George is rather a foolish performance. He is in reality no king at all—but a well paid person who sits around, does as he is told and lays cornerstones.

However, everybody—with nothing in particular to do—will be at the coronation, and it is well to send there a man fit to represent the real ability of his country—and John Hays Hammond is such a man.

Jesse Pomeroy's Letters to His Mother

These are days of "human documents." Fact-stories have in a great measure taken the place of fiction, and truth is revolutionizing America in many particulars.

The appeal of the aged mother of Jesse Pomeroy, the Charlestown life prisoner, to Governor Foss in her son's behalf has brought before the public one of the most interesting sociological studies and problems in eugenics that New England has ever been called upon to consider.

Convicted as a boy of the awful crime of torturing children to death, Pomeroy has lived almost forty years behind prison bars. He went to prison a beardless boy. The silver of age has crept into his hair now. He was sentenced to live and die bereft of his freedom.

But human life is much the same everywhere—much more the same than most persons would believe, behind the locked steel door and under the blue of the limitless sky. Because no one can imprison the mind.

John Bunyan, locked up in an English jail, not only did not despair, but he wrote that great work of cheer, "Pilgrim's Progress."

John Milton, shut out of the world by the cruel curtain of blindness, wrote that masterpiece of dramatic poetry, "Paradise Lost."

Did it ever occur to you, dear reader, that there are right in Boston and stretched from the Atlantic's rocky shores to the Pacific's golden strand, thousands and thousands of men and women manacled to toil as securely as though they were in the cell of a jail, and that their sphere of freedom is not much greater than that of a prisoner?

But they think they're free, and that's the difference.

There is such a thing as a person building his own world, to a certain extent. Jesse Pomeroy has done that something after the manner of the late Edward Everett Hale's hero in his incomparable story, "The Man Without a Country."

It will be recalled that when Hale's hero was found dying in his stateroom on the ship to which he had been sentenced for life—never to hear the name of his country spoken or see its flag or other insignia—that he had drawn with infinite patience and much skill a map of the United States, an eagle and a flag on the wall.

"Here is my country," said the exiled man with his fast fleeting breath, "and there can be no one who loves it more than I do."

So, in his cell, Jesse Pomeroy has built himself a career and a country of which he gives a glimpse in a wonderful series of letters that he has written to his mother within the past forty years.

The notable life prisoner has had time to study—time to think. His mind, unfettered, while his body has been held by bars of steel, Pomeroy has lived in his imagination.

That the public may have a peep into this other world—the world that toils and sorrows, but still LIVES behind prison walls, the remarkable letters written by Jesse Pomeroy to his mother will be printed in the Sunday AMERICAN.

These are this life prisoner's own letters, written in the grim environment of Charlestown State Prison, and they constitute one of the most absorbing human documents ever printed in New England.

The first instalment of these letters will appear in next Sunday's AMERICAN.

The Pomeroy Case

From the Boston Herald.

To the Editor of The Herald:

I was much interested in the account published in The Herald of the interview of Governor Foss and others, with the notorious Jesse Pomeroy in the Charlestown State Prison. It seems to me that a brief review at this time of the case of this remarkable criminal, which attracted so much attention thirty odd years ago, would interest your readers.

A. A. WOOLSON.

Lisbon, N. H., May 11.

[The case of Jesse Pomeroy is one of the most interesting in the criminal annals of this State. In 1871, when only twelve years old, he was convicted of maltreating small boys and was sent to Westboro, where he remained for two years. Almost immediately on his release for good conduct he killed a five-year-old girl. In 1874 he murdered a boy of like age. The details of these crimes are too grewsome for recital, displaying a mania for cruelty somewhat like what the Chinese know as the death of a thousand cuts. In September, 1874, he was sentenced to be hanged, the supreme court refusing to admit a plea of insanity. He was then fifteen. In 1876 Gov. Rice commuted the sentence to imprisonment for life. So for thirty-six years he has been in Charlestown. He has made several efforts to escape, always displaying great ingenuity in his plots and in the tools which he has improvised to carry them out. His most desperate attempt was in 1887, when he used the gas in his cell to create an explosion in which he was nearly killed. A bitter recluse, he spends his time planning schemes for release. Every governor has been the recipient of his petitions. Gov. Guild said to the signers of a pen for Pomeroy's pardon: "I should as soon think of loosing a mad wolf on the public."—Ed.]

Hints for the Summer

A PANAMA hat, which is so called because it doesn't come from Panama and isn't much of a hat, is a suitable lid to purchase—for a friend.

Should your straw hat get soiled, do not take it to a cleaner, but boil it in whitewash. This will destroy it just as quickly.

In the very hot weather you should never give way to anger, which tends to make you feel hotter than ever. So, if a tunnel platform guard jams you back into the car you have just got out of, cussing you to long your hat in the process, smile pleasantly and come back about November, when the weather is cooler. You can then remonstrate with him for his conduct in July.

In fact, all kinds of excitement should be avoided in the Summer. Should you see the statue of Washington about to dive into the Public Garden ask him if he would mind postponing the stunt until the Fall. Should you be caught in a burning building keep cool, anyway until the flames reach you. You will thus avoid dying of heat prostration, although, of course, you may be burned to death.

Put off drinking gin rickeys until the Winter, when you won't want them.

There are a few simple rules to be observed when bathing.

First. Do not try to breathe while your head is under water, for this practice has a singularly irritating effect on the lungs, and also reduces the quantity of ocean available for other bathers.

Second. If you wander along the beach try to remember the location of the bathhouse in which you left your clothes. A bathing suit, while admirably adapted for splashing about in, feels curiously inadequate when one is rambling around a deserted beach after nightfall or trying to dart across a crowded boardwalk in search of a pair of trousers.

Third. It is well to remember that it is just as fair from a float to the beach as from the beach to a float, and spending the night marooned on a floating and inadequately furnished float is a sad and lonely pastime.

It is necessary to reiterate the advice to keep cool.

To keep cool in a crowded theatre go there when the show is over.

To keep cool when your pet scheme proves a frost, you can't.

Remember that you don't have to be an athlete to wear athletic undershirts. Quite the opposite, in fact.

You will never catch a cold from sitting close to an electric fan, if you turn it off before you sit down.

By following these simple rules and going to Greenland for four months you can rob Summer in the city of all its terrors.

What Are We Here For?
